Debtor Confesses Virginia Mass Murders

Clatterbuck Restages Five Killings On Love Farm

Rushed Away To Winchester Jail in Fear of Mob Violence

By John Singerhoff and Tom Moore McBride

Leesburg, Va., June 3.—William Thomas Clatterbuck, 33, early last night dictated and signed a full confession in the slaying of A. Morris Love, his wife, son, his farmhand and the farmhand's wife Tuesday, and revealed he had gone to the Loudoun County sheriff's office to talk business an hour after the mass murders.

The 240-pound quarryman, who had calmly talked business in the sheriff's office and elsewhere in Leesburg, broke down and cried as he confessed to the bludgeonings and shootings on the Love farm.

Charles F. Harrison, Commonwealth's attorney, announced at 8:10 p. m. he had obtained the confession.

A warrant charging Clatterbuck with the murder was sworn out by Sergt. Charles W. Blue of the Virginia State Police and was issued by Judge William A. Metzger, trial judge for Loudoun County.

Blue said Clatterbuck had reenacted the crime step by step at the Love farm.

Price of Evidence

Clatterbuck was taken directly to the State prison in Winchester from the farm to protect him from possible mob violence in Loudoun County, where farmers and townspeople were aroused over the cold-blooded killings of Love, his wife, son, hired man and the hired man's wife.

One piece of evidence which directly tied the murders to Clutterbuck was the fact that the broken rifle stock found near Russell's body was identified as having been in the confessed slayer's possession, Loudoun Sheriff S. P. Alexander said.

In addition, it was discovered

Davies Presents Stalin's Message To Roosevelt

Joseph E. Davies flew in from Moscow yesterday afternoon and handed to President Roosevelt a confidential letter from Premier-Marshal Stalin. It was a reply to a letter from the President, which Davies carried to the Kremlin a month ago.

Davies, traveling in an Army transport plane, landed at the Washington National Airport at 4:51 p. m., and drove directly to the White House. He and President Roosevelt talked for two hours.

"The second mission to Moscow is completed," White House Secretary Stephen Early told reporters.

When it first became known that Davies was going to Moscow, it was widely assumed that his mission was to arrange a face-to-face conference between President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin. The President, however, warned against speculation, telling newspapermen that they doubtless would be wrong.

Abridged Text

Clatterbuck's Slaying Story As Released by Prosecutor

Winchester, Va., June 3.—Here is the abridged confession of William Thomas Clutterbuck, 33, in the slaying of five persons on the farm of A. Morris Love, near Purcellville, Tuesday, as dictated to Commonwealth's Attorney Charles A. Harrison in the Frederick County Courthouse early tonight:

"When I arrived at the Love farm about 8 a. m., I was met at the gate by Mr. Love and James (his son). I walked up to the porch with them and James went inside. Mr. Love and I sat down on the east porch.

"We talked about the note for $2000, on which the cosigners were all forgeries, and the note for $500, which was unforged. Mr. Love told me he was aware of the forgery and wanted them paid immediately. I pleaded with him to hold off for a while. But he said "No," I would have to pay them or he would prosecute me.

Hit Him With a Croquet Mallet

"I saw the croquet set there on the porch and grabbed one of the mallets and hit Mr. Love on the head I don't know how many times.

"Mr. Love had a billfold in his hands containing my notes and the check (which was found on Russell's body). I picked up the wallet and put it in my pocket and threw the mallet as far as I could throw it.

"Then I went around on the north porch and James came out of the dining room door with a rifle in his hands.

"Witohut thinking, I sprang on him and we fought all over the porch. He hurt himself somehow and the blood splashed all over. I got the rifle away from him and he ran into the house. I was about 10 feet behind him when I shot him. (James was shot in the heart from the front, so he must have turned at that point.) I got to him as he lay on the floor and smashed hiis iskull with the butt of the rifle—to make sure he was dead.

Slays Mrs. Love When She Appears

"Mrs. Love was in the kitchen and she case out into the dining room to see what the shot was.

"Then I realized I had to kill her.

"I fired at close range and the bullet struck her in the heart. I was satisfied she was dead.

"Then I went back out on the porch and saw the ticking on the clothesline. It was just washed, I guess. I took one piece of it and covered Mr. Love to hide him from the road.

"I thought Russell and his wife had seen me from behind the barn, so I walked to the barn, opened the gate and walked up to Russell. He didn't seem scared and waited for me to approach.

"At close range I shot Russell through the heart. He fell and I slugged him with the rifle butt. The blow tore loose an extension to the butt James had taped on the stock.

"Then I walked over to the tenant house, and up the steps. I found Mrs. Russell in the kitchen. I fired at her and hit her in the right temple. Then I hit her with the rifle butt and shot her again in the heart as she lay on her back on the floor.

"I came out of the house and went back to where Russell lay. I took the notes out of the wallet, but left the checks in it and stuck the wallet in Russell's pocket.

"I want back to the car and found one of my tires was nearly flat. I drove into Hamilton then and stopped at a bank where I talked to (deleted by Commonwealth's Attorney), then went to a filling station and had my tires filled up and drove to Leesburg.

"I went on into the sheriff's office and talked to Ritter (Policeman Frank Ritter) about a chauffeur's license for one of my drivers and did some errands around town."

Commonwealth's Attorney Harrison said there would be no more facts released to the public until Clatterbuck's trial.

Labor Appeals To Roosevelt On Food Prices

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt received a formal request from ranking labor leaders yesterday to get tough with the Office of Price Administration about food prices, which they contend have risen 24 to 150 per cent since January, 1941.

Members of the combined Labor War Board, made up of representatives of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L., said they did not ask for the removal of Price Administrator Prentiss Brown but that they did ask the President "to intervene with the OPA."

"We do not believe," A. F. of L.

Naval Supremacy

By Daniel De Luce

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 3.—Striking at the heart of Italy's sea communications, daring British and Greek destroyers attacked an enemy convoy off Capo Spartivento at the toe of the Italian boot Tuesday night, and ripped it to shreds without suffering either casualties or damage.

In defiance of the big guns of the Italian fleet, the straight-shooting Allied warships wiped out two Axis merchant vessels and an escorting torpedo boat and sent an enemy destroyer aground on fire. One Greek destroyer participated in the attack.

Gain Naval Supremacy

Smashing of the Italian coastal convoy, coming on the heels of two heavy bombardments of Pantelleria Island by British warships, indicated that the Allies have gained naval supremacy in Italy's southern waters to match their domination of the air over the Mediterranean. In raids on Pantelleria and the southwest coast of Sardinia yesterday, American air forces from North Africa did not lose a single plane.

Capo Spartivento, where the enemy convoy was ambushed, stands at the southern approach to the Strait of Messina, the narrow passageway between Sicily and Italian mainland, through which all shipping between the Italian east and west coasts must thread its way.

One of the sunken Axis merchant ships, a communique said, blew up after being set afire by guns of the

I was at peace with the world yesterday when I was going through the morning mail. I picked up what appeared to be a fat press release from the Office of Price Administration. Skimming through it my eyes fell on this interesting paragraph:

"The drawers of all stenographers are to be numbered as follows: 1-2-3." My interest quickend. I read on.

The drawers of all junior economists and junior business analysts, I discovered, were to be numbered 1-2-3-4. And the top of the OPA hierarchy—the officials—were to have their drawers numbered 1-2-3-4-5-6. (Perhaps one of the qualifications for an OPA official is the ability to count to six.)

I ran for a drink of water.

My nerves settled, I returned to my desk to study the strange OPA document—numbered 9898-3—in greater detail.

I soon came to the conclusion that this six-page memorandum was the bureaucratic high-water mark to regiment the workaday lives of OPA people, officials and employes alike.

Whoever drew up the official document was laboring under the impression that no OPA employe has a brain in his head.

Under the paragraph: "The drawers of all stenographers are to be numbered as follows—then is pictured a rough sketch of a stenographer's desk and the three

President's Back-to-Work Order to Striking Miners

The President's order for coal miners to return to work follows:

Most of the Nation's coal mines are closed because of a general strike which has taken place in defiance of the Government of the United States. I have instructed the Secretary of the Interior, who has possession of the mines for the Government, to proceed to reopen the mines.

The Secretary of the Interior will contniue to operate the mines under the terms and conditions of work which obtained under the old contract which was extended by order of the War Labor Board plus those new terms and conditions which have been approved by the board and which were announced in the board's order of May 25.

As President and Commander in Chief, I order and direct the miners who are not now at work in the mines to return to their work on Monday, June 7, 1943. I must remind the miners that they are working for the Government on essential war work and it is their duty no less than that of their sons and brothers in the armed forces to fulfill their war duties.

Just as soon as the miners return to work, the disposition of the dispute between the miners and the operators will forthwith proceed, under the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board and in accordance with the customary and established procedures governing all cases of this sort

Senate Votes 6 Billion More For Lend-Lease

Rushes Measure To Help Urgent Russian Plans

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Notified that arrangements of "the highest importance" with Russia hinged on speedy action, the Senate late yesterday approved and returned to the House a bill appropriating an additional $6,273,629,000 for the Lend-Lease program.

Acting Majority Leader Hill (Democrat) of Alabama interrupted debate on a controversial Federal job bill to tell the Senate that Lend-Lease Administrator Stettinius had sent word it was necessary to pass the bill at once, "since certain arrangements of the highest importance with Russia cannot be made until the bill is passed."

Asked about the nature of the "important arrangements," Senator Hill said that "I couldn't go into detail. They dealt with lend-lease goods and supplies for Russia, and it was urgent to get that bill through."

18 Billion Dollars Already Voted

As Stettinius looked on from the gallery, the Senate approved the measure on an uncontested voice vote, after hearing Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia declare that in dollars and cents the program will more than pay for itself by shortening the war by six months to a year.

Approval of the bill, adding $6,273,629,000 to the $18,410,000,000 previously appropriated, sent the measure to a conference between the two houses. The Senate dropped a House proviso barring use of funds for farm subsidies, added an amendment by Senator Tobey (Republican) of New Hampshire authorizing sale of an additional 50 million bushels of feed wheat to help relieve what he called an "acute" shortage in New England, but left the House money total unchanged.

Senator George delivered a warm indorsement of the lened-lease program after several members questioned whether America's allies were being as generous with "reverse lend-lease" as this country

Algiers, June 3.—A "French committee of national liberation" headed jointly by Generals Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud was established formally today to "pursue the war at the side of the Allies until total victory over all enemy powers," including Japan.

Formation of this strong central authority to oppose Pierre Laval's Axis-committed regime and to rally the French masses awaiting an Allied invasion of Europe came after almost seven months' patient effort to bring the two French groups under a single banner.

Signs of tension began disappearing here immediately, replaced by a new spirit of conciliation in all official quarters. Enthusiastic demonstrations occurred as the news spread.

Both leaders appear to have fared about equally well in their bargaining which until formal creation of the committee today had produced many signs of discord — including the posting of Giraud forces around the Algiers radio station and other vital points, and the appearance of a tank in the garden of Giraud's palace residence.

Political quarters said that Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, who was appointed by Giraud yesterday as his deputy and charged with maintaining public order in the Algiers area, would be relieved of his two-day-old job now that the executive committee has become an actuality and tension has given way to conciliation.

"A baby has been born," exclaimed American Minister Robert Murphy. "I'm delighted with it. It fulfills all our hopes and there

Foe Will Grab Russian Bases In Red-Jap War, Yarnell Warns

Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell said yesterday there is a "grave possibility" that the Chinese Nationalist government may collapse unless effective aid is forthcoming soon.

Testifying before the House Immigration Committee in support of legislation to repeal the Chinese Exclusion Acts, the retired commander in chief of the United States Asiatic Fleet said effect of the repeal on the Allied cause would compare with Russia's dissolution of the Comintern.

Asserting that the main attack on Japan must come from China, Yarnell added that the most effective means of strengthening the determination of the Chinese to fight on until adequate assistance can be given is to consider China "by act as well as by word" equal in every respect with the other Allied nations.

Although expressing belief that Russia and Japan will go to war, the witness said Russian bases could not be relied upon because they probably will be occupied by Japanese troops.

"This leaves the mainland of China as the only area from which long-range bombers can reach Japan," he added.

William P. Hunt, former member of the United States Consular Service in China, and later a shipping operator in the Orient, who was interned at Hongkong after the outbreak of the war, told the committee the Chinese "are being inoculated" by Japanese propaganda based on the exclusion laws.

"I don't think we can withstand the postwar trade competition in

Lewis Rebuffed

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered more than 500,000 striking miners to return to work Monday, thus indicating his intention to end the Nation's most acute wartime labor crisis without yielding ground to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the mines, was directed "to proceed to reopen the mines" to make work available to the trickle of men the Government hopes will return Monday, laying the foundation for a "back to work" movement which would eventually crush the strike.

"I must remind the miners," the President said, "that they are working for the Government on essential war work and it is their duty no less than that of their sons and brothers in the armed forces to fulfill their war duties."

Selection of the Monday date was in effect official acknowledgement that coal production during the rest of the week—an estimated 10 million tons—was lost as a result of the strike, which entered its fourth day today.

The President knocked down the belief that the miners might get special treatment for their wage demands by specifying:

"Just as soon as the miners return to work, the disposition of the dispute between the miners and the operators will forthwith proceed, under the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board and in accordance with the customary and established procedures governing all cases of this sort."

Ickes was directed to offer work at terms provided by existing contracts "plus those new terms and conditions which have been approved by the board and which were announced in the board's order of May 25." These included payment for occupational charges and increased vacation payments

Uniontown, Pa., June 3 (AP).—Charles Hartman, 50-year-old strapping 6-footer, carried on his self-styled "one-man rebellion" against the coal strike today, going into the mine at the Palmer works of the H. C. Frick Coke Co. near here for the third straight day.

Victorious Chinese Threaten Ichang

Chiang's Troops Sweep to Yangtze Shore Opposite Big Base; Jap Drive Collapses

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, China, June 3.—Supported by an American-Chinese air force which dominated the central China skies and was shooting Japanese planes down at the rate of 14 to 1, the Chinese armies had swept tonight to the south bank of the Yangtze and were separated only by that great river from Ichang, the main Japanese base in Hupeh Province.

Farther down the river, other Chinese troops were declared in a special communique of Chian Kai-shek's command to have trapped 4000 of the Japanese invaders—30,000 of whom were officially declared already to have fallen as casualties.

In yet another drive in the counteroffensive now throwing the Japanese back all along the upper Yangtze front, Chinese columns crossed into Hupeh from Hunan Province, said the high command, and surrounded the Japanese position of Kungan, this some 70 miles southeast of Ichang.

Gain 32 Miles in Less Than Week

The main drive on Ichang, which had advanced 32 miles within less than a week, earlier had overrun and reoccupied the towns of Changyang and Chihkiang, respectively 12 and 35 miles south of that base.

So complete was American-Chinese mastery aloft that in two days Allied pilots had destroyed a minimum of 28 Japanese planes, and probably 36, against two Allied planes lost. American bombers got 20 Japanese planes in a single action.

This air support, the most effective ever given the Chinese armies, was carried on to cut up the retreating invader. On a single avenue of Japanese retreat, the road back from Changyang, Chinese dispatches estimated that Allied planes alone had killed more than 1500 enemy troops by strafing.

The enemy's behavior under this lethal fire convinced Allied airmen that this was his first real experience of heavy assault from the air.

Jap Communications Periled

Japanese communications to Ichang were in imminent danger; the city itself appeared directly threatened.

As dispatches from the front pictured unbroken Chinese successes in what is celebrated as the greatest victory of six years of war in the China theater, the spokesman announced that 100,000 Japanese troops had been turned back in the battle and that of this number 30,000 had fallen as casualties.

He pointed out, however, that five Japanese divisions, previously reported to have been encircled, had a line of retreat still open.

"The word encirclement has been interpreted in a liberal way," he said. "The Japanese were driven back along an arch-shaped line. They are being cut up and dispersed, with smaller units being liquidated. The enemy moved back in confusion and disorder."

Chinese Triumph Elsewhere

He declared the Japanese campaign had utterly collapsed—the first "annihilating blow" having been delivered in what now is being called the Chinese battle of Stalingrad about the town of Shihpei, west of Ichang, where the enemy, under orders to resist to the end, had been unable to maneuver with his tanks and big guns and suffered a bloody defeat, which led to his collapse.

Chinese triumphs far to the east and north were announced also.

The important town of Hwangmei, in Hupeh Province 295 miles to the east of Ichang, fell to Chinese arms, and in the sector some 300 miles north of Ichang the Chinese forces of Shansi Province were declared to have broken Japanese attacks west of the Taiheng Mountains and to be driving the invaders before them toward Linchwan in a counterattack.

As to the critical battle for the upper Yangtze—a battle now regarded as brilliantly won—the Chinese spokesman declared that the feat of the American and Chinese air forces in holding the air had been a great factor in destroying what had initially been a Japanese threat to this capital of Chungking.

Powerful Air Blows Struck

A communique from headquarters of the Fourteenth United States Air Force told of 10 powerful blows struck against enemy supply lines, communications and troops on May 30 and 31 in the whole of the Lake Tungting-Yangtze area.

These were the main results of those powerful assaults:

Four Japanese river boats knocked out, two set afire and two others in all probability sunk.

Twenty-eight Japanese planes certainly destroyed—five of them on the ground and a batch of 23 in a single raid on Ichang in what was officially called "a brilliant demonstration of aerial gunnery" from American bombers—and eight more in all probability.

Of the 23 definitely shot down in flames over Ichang, Chinese fighter pilots got three and American bombers no less than 20.

"Two planes are missing and several others sustained damage in these operations," said the American command in summing up. "All other aircraft returned safely to their bases."

(The Japanese, although asserting that a Chinese army had been "annihilated," in a Tokyo broadcast obliquely employed the language of defeat, saying that Japanese operations in central China had been "successfully concluded and all Japanese forces who participated have been brought back to their bases."

Nazis Report New Red Drive To Split Axis in Caucasus

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), June 4.—The Red army has sprung a new offensive near Temryuk on the Sea of Azov in an effort "to split German forces" clinging to the swampy Kuban bridgehead, but has not achieved any "lasting success," the Berlin radio said last night.

A Tass report quoted front dispatches as saying that air forces of both sides were making "thousands of flights per day" in accelerated sky fighting over the Caucasus, but there were few Soviet details on the land struggle.

Moscow's midnight bulletin, recorded early today by the Soviet monitor here used the week-old phrase "fighting continued" to describe operations on the Taman Peninsula between Novorossisk on the Black Sea coast and Temryuk on the Sea of Azov.

German broadcasts recorded by the Associated Press said the attack on Temryuk, on the German left flank, was launched without any cessation in Red army attacks on Krimskaya, a point between Temryuk and Novorossisk.

It is in this area that the German radio 24 hours ago acknowledged that "weak remnants" of Soviet forces had broken through to the Sea of Azov in an obvious effort to seize this important point near the Kerch Strait across which German supplies are ferried from the Crimea.

One German broadcast said Soviet airmen were repeatedly attacking the few supply roads leading back to the Kerch Strait, and also were strafing German cargo boats in the strait.

On land, Russian equipment and men were said to be "ten times superior" to those of the Germans. Berlin has stressed this purported Russian superiority, along with Germany supply difficulties, ever since the announcement a week ago of a big Russia push.

A Soviet noon communique yesterday said 37 German planes were shot down in the Kuban Valley, and a Pravda front correspondent said the wreckage of dozens of enemy planes littered the foothills near Novorossisk and the swamps to the north.

But the heavy air action was not confined to the Caucasus. A Moscow broadcast said long-range Russian bombers flew 250 miles west of Kharkov in the Ukraine to raid Kiev Wednesday night, and to attack Roslavl, a railway junction between Smolensk and Bryansk on the Central Front.

Two Planes Were Lost

In addition a transport and tug were sunk in the Gulf of Finland by Soviet airmen, the midnight communique said, and ships and aircraft combined to sink an enemy transport, minesweeper and two patrol ships in the Barents Sea.

A German submarine and tanker were reported destroyed by the Soviet Black Sea fleet.

Bahaman Workers Row in Florida

Hastings, Fla., June 3 (AP).—Two companies of the Florida State Guard were called here today to assist police in maintaining order following a disturbance last night at a camp housing Bahaman Negro workers imported to help harvest the potato crop.

Constable Archie Greene said two Bahamans were shot during the brawl, which was confined to the labor group. He said about 100 were arrested. Between 400 and 500 participated, he said, but all was quiet today and most of the Bahamans were back at work in the potato fields.

is no doubt that there is sincerity in all quarters."

The seven-man committee, which is to be expanded to nine, will direct the French war effort until France is freed and able to elect its own leaders. Besides the co-Presidents Giraud and De Gaulle, the other committeemen are:

Gen. Alphonse J. Georges and Jean Monnet, named by Giraud; Rene Massigli and Andre Philip, appointed by De Gaulle; and Gen. Georges Catroux, named by both Presidents.

A French communique described the committee as "a servant of the French people," made public a number of personnel changes, and said:

"The committee will pursue in close cooperation with all the Allies the common fight with a view to bringing about the complete liberation of all French and Allied territories, and until total victory over all enemy powers has been achieved."

Committee members said this program included French cooperation to defeat Japan.

At today's session De Gaulle was understood to have subscribed entire to Giraud's expressed conviction that the purpose of the new body was not to build up the personal power of any individual or set up a system which might lead to a totalitarian regime.

One of the committee's first acts was to make a series of changes in French official posts.

Catroux Governs Algeria

General Catroux was named Governor-General of Algeria, replacing the resigned Marcel Peyrouton. Catroux also will direct Moslem affairs throughout the empire.

Gabriel Puaux, former high commissioner in Syria, was named resident-general of Morocco, succeeding Gen. Auguste Nogues.

General Bouscat was appointed commander of French air forces in North and West Africa, telescoping posts held respectively by Gen. Jean Mendigal and Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret. Mendigal was retired, and the future status of Bergeret was not made known immediately.

Future of Giraud

Whether Giraud will remain commander in chief of the French military is to be decided at a session tomorrow, it was said.

Rene Massigli provisionally was designated to handle foreign affairs. The new central authority will set up other ministries shortly but it does not pretend to be a French government.

These messages outline in great detail the provisions which were stated in the French communique as follows:

"The committee will hand over its power to a provisional government which will be constituted according to the laws of the French Republic as soon as the liberation of France will permit it, and not later than at the time of the total liberation of France.

"The committee takes a solemn oath to reestablish all French liberties and laws of the French Republic and a republican form of government, destroying at the same time the arbitrary power and personal leadership which today is inflicted upon the country."

Peyrouton Resignation Laid to Conniving; Hollow Political Victory Seen for De Gaulle

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, June 3.—The recent resignation of Marcel Peyrouton as governor general of Algeria was less of a victory for Gen. Charles de Gaulle than represented in some quarters at first.

I learned today what actually happened.

Realizing that he was bound to be sacrificed to appease De Gaulle's purge demands, Peyrouton was ready to resign and desired to do so before being ousted, and on the best possible terms.

Shortly after De Gaulle's arrival two men, who convinced him they were close to De Gaulle, called on Peyrouton and said, in effect:

"Now is the opportunity to make your peace with De Gaulle. Resign to him humbly, beg to be reduced to your status as a mere reserve captain of colonial infantry, go through a purgatorial period and you will come out on top, Peyrouton."

Made Good Sense to Him

This made good sense to him and he followed their advice. He resigned to De Gaulle, the man who wanted to get him. As a courtesy, he also resigned to Giraud, the man who had appointed him. But he sent his resignation to Giraud some hours after he sent it to De Gaulle.

Now, the men who had approached Peyrouton were adherents of De Gaulle, but not very close to him. They were in his movement, but not his confidants. Their real aim was to have the office vacated because they had a candidate of their own for the job.

Suddenly De Gaulle received the resignation of one of the men he had set out to get. He accepted it immediately and ordered Peyrouton to Syria. In good faith, he sent copies of Peyrouton's resignation and his acceptance to Giraud. For De Gaulle it was a victory, for he knew nothing of the activities of the two men who had talked Peyrouton into resigning.

Press Agents' Triumph

De Gaulle's press agent, being livelier than Giraud's decided they might as well make the most of this triumph. They summoned correspondents shortly before midnight and gave them the texts of the exhanges, with a voila."

Some correspondents immediately interpreted it as meaning that De Gaulle had "achieved mastery of the political situation."

It was late at night, but not too late for the staff of Giraud to take action when, shortly after they received the resignation and acceptance from De Gaulle, there came Peyrouton's resignation to Giraud.

Giraud's press agents did not summon the correspondents. They merely achieved publication in the local press; not of the Peyrouton letter of resignation to De Gaulle, but of his letter to Giraud; not of De Gaulle's reply, but of Giraud's.

The letters of resignation were almost identical save that in the one to Giraud, Peyrouton expressed his thanks for having been appointed. The acceptances differed in that De Gaulle ordered Peyrouton to Syria immediately. Giraud asked him to hold on to his job for the time being.

Peyrouton took Giraud's order. He held office for at least a day longer when the new committee named Gen. Georges Catraux to the post.

Axis Convoy Destroyed by Allies

Allied destroyers.

An Italian communique heard here from the Rome radio reported that "the enemy renewed its bombarding actions against Pantelleria from the air and from the sea." This apparently was the third naval pounding of the little island this week, the Allies having announced two previously. Today's Allied communique, however, did not mention a third naval action for this week against Pantelleria.

American bombers, meantime, swept over Pantelleria almost at will, attacking the island's battered military targets in continuation of the merciless air offensive against the Axis underside. Bomb-carrying Warhawk fighters made several sweeps over the fortified island in the morning, while Marauder medium bombers and Lightning fighters harried the enemy garrison in the afternoon. One building in the port area was seen to blow up.

Warhawks dived low to attack communication lines along roads between the southern Sardinian towns of Teulada and Sarroch, and then sped on to machine gun radio equipment, soldiers and barracks at San Antioco off the southwest coast of Sardinia.

The weakened condition of Axis air forces in the Mediterranean was graphically illustrated when not a single enemy fighter rose to oppose the attacks either on Pantelleria or Sardinia.

Operating from bases in the Middle East, R. A. F. long-range fighters made another sweep over the Aegean Sea yesterday, sinking two small sailing vessels in an island harbor and damaging a third. The planes returned safely.

Bill Expands Scope Of Social Security

Many Variations From Beveridge Scheme Are Provided by Measure

Legislation to protect most Americans from economic hazards "throughout their lifetime," through an all-embracing Federal social security program was presented to Congress yesterday by Senators Wagner of New York and Murray of Montana, and Representative Dingell of Michigan (Democrats). Capitol leaders thought it doubtful that the bill would become law this year.

The proposals add up to a total similar to the famous British Beveridge plan, but differ in important details. Leaders of both the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. favor the measure, and said so yesterday, making clear that their organizations would support early congressional action.

Wage and salary earners would help pay for the enlarged program with a 6 per cent levy on earnings up to $3000 a year, in place of 1 per cent now, a rate which present law will boost to 2 per cent next year. Employers would match the levy with their 6 per cent in place of 4 per cent now, and 5 per cent scheduled for next year. The increased contributions would total about five billion a year.

15 Million More Persons

For the extra price, an additional 15 million persons, now excluded, would be placed under the social security program; men and women in the service would be carried under the social security program during the war, and eligible for unemployment compensation afterward as though they had paid right along; minimum and maximum old age and survivors benefits would be boosted (for a couple) to $30 and $120, respectively, a month. The present maximum is $85.

A new national system of medical and hospital care would be available, with individuals left the free choice of doctor. Women workers would be granted maternity benefits.

One economic safeguard would be enlarged unemployment allowances up to $30 a week for as many as 26 weeks, or 52 weeks, if the funds "are deemed adequate." Another would be new monthly benefits for an insured worker who is permanently disabled before reaching retirement age, and these would equal retirement benefits and vary according to the number of his dependents. Women workers would be eligible for retirement at 60, instead of the present 65.

Inflation Control Aid

Senator Wagner, in presenting the bill, said it would help now to control inflation by taking more money from the great mass of workers, and would be valuable in the postwar readjustment by maintaining "steady family and consumer income when wages are cut off," and tiding workers and soldiers over unemployment.

"Put into operation, this bill would greatly reduce the cost of postwar spending for relief purposes," he said.

Two Plans Compared

Chief differences between the new bill and the Beveridge plan, said Wagner, are these:

Where the British proposal would put more than half the cost for the first year on the government, the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill would be financed at the start by employe and employer contributions, with the Federal Government paying enough to cover insurance rights of war veterans.

Where the Beveridge plan varies benefits solely according to dependents, the bill gears contributions and benefits to past wages as well as dependents.

The Beveridge plan guarantees a minimum income for life, but the Wagner bill limits the duration of unemployment, disability and illness benefits.

The bill skips the Beveridge provisions for grants for marriage, birth of children, children's allowances, dental care or medicine in the home.

Col. Love Reported On Missing Plane

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 3 (AP).—Army authorities disclosed today that Col. P. R. Love, well known St. Louis flier and a friend of Charles A. Lindbergh, was among the 11 reported aboard a twin-engined bomber missing since leaving here Monday for Reno, Nev.

Peterson Field said only that Colonel Love boarded the plane in New York. He is with the Air Transport Command.

"We are spending at the rate of eight billion dollars a month for the war," George declared. Hope Fades for 17 on Airliner Attacked at Sea by Germans

By the Associated Press

London, June 3.—except for one wholly unconfirmed Axis radio report of rescue, hope waned today for possible survivors of the missing Lisbon-to-London airliner which was attacked by a Nazi sky raider Tuesday over the Bay of Biscay, where British pilots on anti-submarine patrol reported continued German aerial activity.

Dispatches from Madrid said that the Spanish destroyer Melilla had returned to El Ferrol after a futile 24-hour search of the sea where the airliner was lost with 13 passengers including Actor Leslie Howard, and a Dutch crew of four.

Madrid sources made no comment on reports broadcast by Berlin and Rome that the Spanish fishing ship Everisto Nunhez had picked up six survivors.

May Have Sought Churchill

It was believed in London that the Nazi raider had attacked the plane Tuesday on the outside chance that Prime Minister Winston Churchill could have been among the passengers.

Continued German air action was reported by an Air Ministry communique which said an Australian manned Sunderland flying boat shot down three of eight Junkers 88s which attacked it while on anti-submarine patrol over the Bay of Biscay yesterday.

British pilots attributed the increase in enemy air activity in the Biscay area and attributed it to a Nazi attempt to engage all Britain-bound planes.

German-controlled radio stations have engaged in considerabl speculation as to Churchill's whereabouts during the past five days. On Sunday he was reported at Gibraltar and on Monday an Axis broadcast, quoting a report from La Linea, Spain, said that he had left Gibraltar for Africa.

Axis Still Speculates

Observers here agreed that the Axis must have despaired temporarily of springing a trap, for a new broadcast from Rome reported: "It seems that Mr. Churchill will now go to Moscow, whence he will go to Washington without returning to London for the time being."

A German intimation that the airliner had been escorted by bombers was officially denied today.

A German communique yesterday reported that Nazi planes on the Biscay patrol had shot down three bombers and a transport plane.

30 Subs Reported Sunk During May

London, June 3 (AP).—The Daily Mail said in a front page story tonight that more than 30 Axis submarines were sunk in the Atlantic during May by sea and air attacks.

It said the total was confirmed by a detailed check of all reports and figures available in London and Washington.

Japan Faces Attack From Attu, Stimson Warns

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American forces "are now within striking distance" of Japanese territory, Secretary Stimson said yesterday in commenting on the recapture of Attu Island by our troops.

This indirect warning of coming attacks on the enemy homeland was followed by a disclosure that Army engineers on the Aleutian island are surveying various sites [illegible] more landing fields.

Brig. Gen. William E. Lynd, Army Air Force officer on the staff of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific Fleet commander, who has just returned from Attu, told reporters that other sites on the island are being considered as possible landing strips besides the partially completed field built by the Japs.

Enemy Being Erased

Lynd emphasized the difficulties of carving an air base out of the rocky island by stating that the potential fields "are standing on end." He declared, however, that Attu probably can be eventually be made into a bomber base.

Secretary Stimson told his press conference that the Japanese garrison on Attu has been "annihilated" except for a few isolated groups. The Navy gave point to his statement later by revealing that 1791 Japanese, by actual count, were killed on the island.

"This figure does not include the unknown number killed by artillery fire and bombs," the Navy added. "Such casualties were either cremated or buried by the Japanese."

Army troops, the Navy communique reported, "combed scattered areas" on the island Tuesday and by noon had "eliminated" minor groups of Japs that were found.

Bombers Go Into Action

Stimson would not elaborate on his statement that the recapture of Attu puts us within striking distance of Japan. Pressed by reporters, he merely smiled and added that from the Aleutian island to Japanese territory was "a pretty long distance."

The Navy communique reported attacks Tuesday by Army Mitchell bombers and Army Lightning and Warhawk fighters on Kiska—Japan's remaining Aleutian base. It also revealed that Ventura Vega B-34 medium bombers went into action in the North Pacific for the first time.

Bomb hits were scored on the airfield runway, gun emplacements and main camp area, and enemy positions were strafed by our low-flying fighters.

It was also reported that Liberator heavy bombers attacked two Japanese bases on Bougainville Island in the Solomons May 31. Many fires were started at Tinputs Harbor and Numa Numa, and two small enemy ships were bombed. One was damaged and beached.

General Lynd told reporters Japanese troops on Attu were well supplied with food, ammunition and antiaircraft batteries—much more than we had expected. The ack-ack fire at Attu and on Kiska is "very accurate," he stated.

He emphasized that the weather was the greatest foe faced in the Attu campaign, and declared that the present is the foggiest time of the year. The best weather of the year came last month when we started the campaign, he said.

Lynd said he believed the job of capturing Kiska would be tougher than Attu, but that the enemy would have as much trouble relieving their garrison there as they did at Attu.

War Sidelights

German Dye Trust Head Flees To Spain to Elude Gestapo

London, June 3 (AP).—A foreign source with good underground connections reported today that Georg van Schnitzler, head of the I. G. Farben Industrie Dye Trust in Germany, had fled by airplane to Spain.

This source, who may not be identified by name, reported that the German industrialist told Spanish authorities he had escaped Gestapo arrest by a few hours.

Von Schnitzler is related to German Field Marshal Gen. Fedor von Bock by marriage, the informant said. He added that Von Schnitzler was believed identified with the general in efforts to place the German high command in a dominant position in Germany, supplanting Hitler.

The informant said it was reported common talk in Berlin that Von Bock once more had been relieved of the Russian command.

Town Buried 8 Orphans

A Southwest Coast Town, England, June 3 (AP).—Eight orphan girls who were among the 20 children killed in the German bombing of a Sunday school last Sunday were buried today in a communal grave.

The girls, aged 10 to 12 years, were from a nearby church army home. The other 12 children killed in the attack are being buried individually.

"THAT'S ALL"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

No longer a secret inside the Diplomatic Corps is the jealousy between Madame Chiang Kai-shek and her brother, T. V. Soong, the Foreign Minister of China. While they were in Washington they did not speak, and it is doubtful if they exchanged more than a few words all during Madame Chiang's visit in the Eastern U. S. A.

On one occasion when Madame Chiang was in Washington, the unhappy Chinese Ambassador had to remain at his home hoping for a call from Madame Chiang, therefore was late getting to dinner at Madame Chiang's brothers'. Arriving at the Soong house, the Ambassador was kept waiting in the drawing room for a full hour and a half until all the guests had finished dinner. Only then was he permitted to greet them.

Reason for the jealousy between Madame Chiang and other members of her family is the fact that she is the "kid" sister. And suddenly through her marriage to Chiang Kai-shek she has taken all the limelight. Ordinarily, in China, her brother would be the head of the family. And her older sister, Madame Kung would play a much more dominant role. But now the younger sister has eased both of them out of their traditional place.

In China, T. V. Soong had built up an important position for himself and, his critics said, was planning to ease the Generalissimo out of his place as head of China. He even had his own trained guards. However, while he was out of the country conferring with the international bankers, Chiang Kai-shek took over Soong's guards, transferred them into the army, and Brother T. V. came back to find himself shorn of power. Now Soong remains more or less permanently in this country.

However, the Generalissimo likes T. V., and they get along far better than T. V. gets along with his own sister.

Note: It was one of Madame Chiang's nieces, Miss Kung who got people in the White House so upset by her manner. Not satisfied with the White House service, she picked up the telephone to call Secretary of State Hull to complain to him personally. Fortunately before the call could go through, someone persuaded her that this was not the thing to do.

Double-Shift Stimson

Secretary of War Henry Stimson's backing and filling on the Kilday bill, which would give fathers deferment priority over single men and married men without children, has left the young author of the legislation Representative Paul Kilday of Texas, slightly bewildered.

All in all, the Secretary of War took three different positions.

When the bill was before the House Military Committee, Stimson condemned it as unworkable. Later, in a letter to the House Rules Committee, he took position No. 2. He averred that the War Department "would have no objection" to the measure if the Military Committee interpreted it properly.

Specifically, Stimson took exception to a Military Committee report construing the bill to mean that all single men and men without children should be "inducted" prior to fathers. He pointed out that because of shifts in population and other factors, no Selective Service director could be sure that every single man in a State had been called up, which might bar the inducting of fathers needed in the service.

If the phrase, "called for induction" (with respect to single men and husbands without children) were substituted, Stimson said, this would not preclude the induction of fathers and the legislation would be satisfactory. The House Military Committee promptly made the desired change in a supplemental report, stating: "Therefore, it will be seen that the committee is in agreement with the War Department as to the proper construction of the bill."

However, Kilday and the committee were due for a rude awakening about six weeks later when the Senate Military Affairs Committee voted to shelve the father-deferment bill. It developed that the adverse vote was inspired chiefly by a letter from Secretary Stimson. This was the third different position he had taken. This time he stated that the bill couldn't be administered "without seriously reducing the orderly flow of men into the Army in the proper numbers and with the appropriate qualifications."

"I can understand a man reversing himself once, but not twice," groans Kilday.

Less Hogs, More Cows

Few people realize the extent of the Washington control over the production and consumption of the Nation's food supplies.

By dispensing benefit payments or by withholding them; by establishing price floors and price ceilings; by rationing some foods and not rationing others; by removing some foods from civilian markets entirely, the Government sits like an engineer before an instrument panel.

A twist of this valve will bring up the production of pork, and a turn of another will alter the eating habits of the entire Nation.

The twists about to be made are in favor of higher production of dairy products and lower production of hogs. Hog numbers have been increased greatly, but the animals are eating us out of grain.

Washington experts, therefore, have made a study of what they call the "nutritive contribution" of different types of livestock products, considering the expense of feed, land, and labor involved. Here are the conclusions:

1. Hogs will return more calories per unit of livestock feed than any other type of livestock. Whole milk from dairy cows is next in value.

2. But dairy products return more protein than hogs do, or than any other livestock product. And protein is a more critical item in the diet than calories.

3. In terms of labor cost, dairy products are the most efficient, eggs are second, while cattle and hogs tie for third place.

4. In terms of land cost, dairy products yield more proteins per acre than any other animal product.

The final conclusion is that "our best utilization of labor, feed and land would require further emphasis upon dairy production and on complete utilization of dairy products."

This means that the people sitting at the control panel in Washington are closing the throttle marked "pork," closing another throttle marked "fat cattle," and opening the throttle marked "milk."

Both farmers and consumers may soon expect directives from Washington to put these findings into effect.

Pittsburgh Home Milk Service Halted in Skip-Day Strike

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 3.—A strike of A. F. L. drivers against an order of the Office of Defense Transportation to make deliveries every other day virtually halted home deliveries of milk in Pittsburgh today.

The drivers said they objected to having to deliver double loads on every-other-day trips.

Many hundreds of gallons of milk were dumped into sewers because dairies lacked storage space.

Milk deliveries to stores were not affected by the strike.

This will not prevent a milk famine in the city, however, if the strike continues, as the milk drivers' union had declined to increase its wholesale deliveries.

The public was also able to get milk by going to dairies.

Federal conciliators were attempting to settle the dispute.

St. Louis, June 3 (AP).—Approximately 3700 Negro employes of the St. Louis Ordnance Plant, refusing to continue work under white foremen, remained away from their jobs today.

A company spokesman said the Negroes were employed in three shifts at one of the plant's production units.

Workers Vote to Return

Detroit, June 3 (AP).—Leo Lamotte, East Side regional director of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), announced this afternoon that workers who walked off their jobs at the Packard Motor Car Co. plant here had voted to return to work with the afternoon shift.

Strictly Mine Strike Bill Threatened in House

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

With high Administration backing, House leaders last night attempted to rebuild the far-reaching Smith antistrike bill into a powerful weapon for breaking the coal strike.

Fighting back at a series of moves for drastic general legislation, leaders swung in behind a substitute bill by Majority Whip Ramspeck invoking Connally bill penalties against the mine walkout.

Before the House adjourned the Administration move for a strictly mine strike bill was threatened by a formidable coalition effort to "freeze out" the Ramspeck plan by swift passage of a more sweeping measure.

In a parliamentary tangle so involved that members pled ignorance of what they were voting on, the House finally took a recess until today, when leaders will attempt to turn back the coalition compromise and substitute the Ramspeck bill.

But by swift footwork, Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, cooperating with Republican authors of a compromise measure, had maneuvered the Administration plan into a position where it may never see the light of day. The first vote will come on the new measure favored by Smith, and all amendments to it. If it is adopted, the fight will be over and the Ramspeck move blocked.

Smith waited until a substitute bill was offered by Representative Harness (Republican) of Indiana reviving part of the Virginian's original measure, then offered limited additions to it. These Harness promptly agreed to accept.

As Republicans started swinging to the Smith-Harkness "compromise," Ramspeck, Majority Leader McCormack and a long line of Administration Democrats took the floor in an effort to convince members that only a revised version of the Senate-passed Connally bill can be enacted in time to meet the present crisis.

In the form offered by Ramspeck, this Administration plan would not only give the WLB long-needed subpena powers, and supply statute force to the "hold the line" and other stabilization orders, but would apply criminal penalties against instigation of strikes in Government owned plants. Particularly applicable against the mine strike, leaders said, would be language making it a crime to aid in such a strike "by giving direction or guidance in the conduct of such interruption or by providing funds for the conduct or direction thereof or for the payment of strike, unemployment or other benefits to those participating therein."

It was learned on good authority that not only would some members of the WLB welcome this subpena power to cope with Lewis in any future contest, but that others highly placed in the Administration regard the Ramspeck substitute as a desirable weapon to deal with the mine strike.

The stringent bill reported by the House Military Committee was almost lost in yesterday's shuffle of substitutes and amendments, but under the Harness-Smith move was beginning to assume much of its old shape.

The Harness substitute, on which the first decisive House vote will come, requires 30 days notice and a secret ballot of workers before a strike can be called. Violations of this requirement would be punished by subjecting violators to civil damage suits and removing benefits under existing labor statutes for one year. Registration of unions and membership data would be required. Labor organizations as well as banks and corporations would be prohibited from making political contributions.

To the Harness bill, Smith proposed an amendment adding all of the provisions of his original bill except three. He dropped from his amendment provisions outlawing intimidation of workers and violent picketing, prohibitions on sympathy and jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, and authority for the Attorney General to seek injunctions to enforce WLB antistrike orders.

You'd say "good-bye" to a whiskey that bites—

That's why Imperial is "velveted"

This "Velveting" works wonders in smoothness—gives IMPERIAL that distinctive, easy-to-take goodness which is making millions say "wonderful!" And—a goodness that has made IMPERIAL one of America's most-wanted whiskies.

But like sugar and coffee, IMPERIAL is on quota—because our stills are now making war alcohol instead of whiskey.

And sometimes delivery is held up a day or so because shipments of war materials and food naturally come first. So if your store or tavern sometimes cannot supply you with IMPERIAL, please be patient and remember there is a mighty good reason for it.

Meat Board Faces Beef Problem First

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

When the War Meat Board convenes Monday for a first session its immediate task will be to find out just what — and where — the country's beef supply is.

War Food Administration specialists yesterday were trying to find ways by which the measuring could be done, and declared it to be current number one meat problem.

They admitted themselves to be in the same boat as that occupied by consumers generally. They know there's plenty of beef—but try and find it.

Rather than coming into regular trade channels when rationing started, as had been hoped, beef has put on its bggest disappearing act since that time.

Black Market a Factor

The number of cattle on ranges next January, a WFA official said, will be even greater than the record number of this year. Yet the number reaching recognized slaughter houses is down 10 per cent.

Black markets are a serious factor in this paradox, the spokesman said, but not the only one. Increases in local beef consumption have been tremendous, and rationing experts could not foresee that increased purchasing power would cause salt pork eaters to shift to steak.

To conrol the local slaughtering, the Department of Agriculture inaugurated a slaughter permit system that had to be withdrawn because it was in effect "legalizing black markets" and getting no more beef onto regular markets. The system is being generally reviewed and some revision of it may go back into effect when the War Meat Board gets into operation.

Slaughter Problems

There are 400 slaughterers under Federal inspection, probably 3000 other wholesale slaughterers, and "we do not know how many retail butchers doing their own slaughtering," the WFA man said.

When the supply is determined, figures on it will be kept up to date on a week-to-week basis and the board will work for an equitable distribution between civilian demands, military requirements, and lend-lease purchasing.

Other problems with which the board will concern itself were declared to be:

1. The price squeeze on slaughters under present ceilings, with a view to recommending possible adjustments at wholesale levels.

2. The difficulty the Army is having getting beef for its soldiers.

3. A program that will enable cattle feeders to continue to feed their cattle, in the face of diminishing feed supplies.

Prices Uncertain

After the first day's meeting of board members in Chicago—which will be the board's headquarters—the board will meet Tuesday and Wednesday with special representatives from producers, feeders, and slaughterers.

The WFA does not agree with theories that any considerable number of cattle is being held back by producers. Corn for feed is difficult to get, they explain, the farm labor supply is short, and the future of prices is too uncertain. With no price ceilings on livestock, the producers' status as to prices is considered as favorable as they could reasonably expect in the future.

The board will deal eventually with all meats—but beef will engage its attention for several weeks, it was declared.

Movie Aspirant's Mother Sues Chaplin on Paternity Charge

Girl Was Arrested Following Scene At Actor's Home

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 3.—A paternity suit was filed in superior court today charging that Charles Chaplin, film comedian, is the father of the unborn child of Joan Berry, 23, movie aspirant who was jailed recently after a disturbance at the actor's home.

The suit was filed by the young woman's mother, Mrs. Gertrude E. Berry, as guardian for the unborn child.

The suit asks $10,000 for prenatal care, $5000 court costs and $2500 per month for support of the unborn infant.

Chaplin's attorneys, Loyd Wright and Charles E. Killikan, released the following statement from the actor:

"Miss Berry states her unborn child was conceived in December, last. The first claim made upon me by Miss Berry was in May and was accompanied by demand for the payment of $150,000. I am not responsible for Miss Berry's condition."

In an affidavit filed by Mrs. Berry in support of a companion action to require Chaplin to show cause why he should not pay support money, she asserted that the comedian denies paternity. The affidavit alleges Miss Berry and Chaplin "are not now and never have been married."

Chaplin was ordered by Superior Judge William S. Baird to appear at 9:30 a. m. June 17, in response to the show-cause affidavit.

Last month Miss Berry, who professionally spells her name Barry, was sentenced to 30 days in jail in Beverly Hills for probation violation after she assertedly climbed through a window into Chaplin's home.

Later she was released to the custody of her attorney after the latter reported she was in ill health. Marcus J. Crahan, county jail physician, said examination of Miss Berry indicated her condition "was consistent with pregnancy."

She was arrested on a vagrancy charge last January 2 in Beverly Hills and placed on probation on condition that she leave the city.

Chaplin, whose age is stated in the complaint to be "approximately 54," has been married three times. His marriage to Mildred Harris in 1918 ended in divorce two years later. The next, to Lita Grey, terminated in 1928. In 1936 he and Paulette Goddard were married in Hong Kong; divorce followed in Mexico a few months ago.

Man Seized on Roof, Safety Net Is Spread

New York, June 3 (AP).—While police rigged emergency nets below, a fast-talking sergeant seized a man today as he stood on a parapet of the roof of a five-story building at Forty-first Street and First Avenue.

Sergt. Patrick Skea went to the roof and kept up a conversation with the man until the nets were adjusted. He then stepped forward and collared him. The man gave his name as Alden McHugh of Cleveland.

Six Tax Dates Marked for Pay-Go Plan

By the Associated Press

John I. (for income) Taxpayer should get out his red pencil and mark these dates on his calendar if the pay-as-you-go revenue collection bill awaiting President Roosevelt's action becomes law:

June 15—Pay the quarterly installment as usual on 1942 income tax. (You'll get credit for this and the March 15 installment as payments on your 1943 income.)

July 1—Be not too surprised when the boss starts deducting from your pay 20 per cent of all over basic exemptions of $12 weekly for single persons, $24 weekly for married (plus $6 for each dependent). He'll be ordered to do that and turn it over to the Treasury as current payments on victory and income taxes.

September 15—If you're single and make more than $2700 or married and make more than $3500 file with your tax collector an estimate of your 1943 earnings and pay one-fourth of the excess over the amount being withheld from your salary. If you get your money from sources other than wages or salaries, file an estimate and pay one-fourth of the total tax.

December 15—Second and last chance to estimate your 1943 income upward or downward (if you are more than 20 per cent under on your guess, the Treasury will charge you 6 per cent interest penalty). Pay a quarterly installment. Farmers may file their first estimate (have 33½ per cent leeway on guess).

January 1, 1944 — Happy New Year and you should have that satisfied feeling of being technically all even with Uncle Sam on your income tax for the first time in history.

March 15, 1944—Comes the day of final reckoning. Compare your final, actual tax liability with what you paid in 1943 in withholding taxes or quarterly installments, get a rebate or pay the remainder.

If your 1942 tax was not all abated but only 75 per cent of it, pay one-half of the remainder on this date.

Figure your 5 per cent victory tax, take the deductions and pay the additional over what has been withheld, or get a rebate.

Estimate your 1944 income if it is not from wages or salaries and make a quarterly payment on it. If 20 per cent is withheld from your pay and you are single and make more than $2,700 or married and make more than $3,500, figure the difference between your total estimated 1944 tax and the amount to be withhold and pay one-fourth of it.

Bids Ordered For Arlington Health Offices

The Public Buildings Administration yesterday ordered advertising of bids for the new Arlington County Public Health Administration Building, to be erected this year.

Bids will be opened June 22. Funds for this building were obtained under the Lanham Act totaling $168,000.

The building will be erected on property owned by the Arlington Hospital Association at North Sixteenth and Edison Streets.

The building will house the personnel of the county health department, including the county laboratory. Space will be provided for the following clinics: Tuberculosis, venereal disease, dental, babies and infant and maternal hygiene.

The project received the approval of the United States Public Health Service, FWA, WPB, vital area board and the PBA.

Pacific Assurance Arouses Gratitude

Sydney, Australia, June 3 (AP).—On behalf of the Australian people, Prime Minister John Curtin expressed today to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill appreciation for what he described as their assurance that the war in the Pacific would be prosecuted with the same vigor as the war in Europe.

Coleman Jennings Named War Drive Fund Chairman

Coleman Jennings, Community Chess president and Washington civic leader, has been appointed campaign chairman of the 1944 Community War Fund drive, Edwin E. Graham, general chairman, announced yesterday. He succeeds Bruce R. Allen, formerly superintendent of Western Union here, who was transferred to Philadelphia.

JENNINGS

In taking over his new assignment, Jennings was informed by Graham that enrollment of campaign workers for the fall drive has already begun and that "active preparation for the coming campaign is in progress."

Jennings, who was born in Johannesburg, South Africa, of American parents, has lived in Washington since 1906. He was graduated from Harvard in 1915 and, after attending Harvard Law School for two years, was commissioned a lieutenant in the aviation section of the Signal Corps, U. S. A. He served in France and was made a chevalier of the French Legion of Honor. Later he became one of the special aides of President Wilson on his first visit to France.

In 1936 Jennings was chairman of the Community Chest campaign and he has been the Chest's president for five years. He was one of the original members of the Community War Fund's executive committee and has served in this capacity ever since. He also is a member of the board of directors of the Washington Federation of Churches and chairman of its defense commission.

Director of Riggs National Bank, Jennings belongs to the Metropolitan Racquet Club, Chevy Chase Club, Riding Club and Harvard Club of New York. He is a member of the board of directors of the Washington Heart Association and chairman of the Coordinating Council on Home Hospitality of the War Hospitality Committee. Jennings' home is at 1910 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest.

Eycett to Manage Summer Concerts At Watergate

Ralph Lycett of the community concerts division of the Columbia Concert Corporation, will manage the National Symphony's Watergate concerts this year, J. P. Hayes, general manager of the symphony announced last night.

Lycett, former public relations director for the Westport (Conn.) Country Playhouse, has acted as tour manager for Lily Pons and has been associated with Grace Moore, Lawrence Tibbett, James Melton, Dorothy Maynor, Marion Anderson, Albert Spalding and other concert artists.

THREE CALLS A MINUTE:

Our Information Department was one of the busiest places in town the Monday Bus Service was reduced in compliance with the directive of the Office of Defense Transportation. There are six telephone lines to that Department and everyone of them was busy from 7 A.M. when it opened until midnight when it closed.

Requests for information came in from all over town, natural enough of course when such a major operation had to be made. After the smoke cleared away a bit we counted up and found that on Monday 3,200 calls had come to the desk in the 18 hours it was open and almost as many Tuesday and Wednesday. That is at the rate of 178 an hour, pretty close to three a minute, and calls came in well over 200 an hour at times. Even with six women working that is a flock of calls, particularly when you bear in mind that many information requests could not be answered in a few words.

When we take our hats off to the public for its spirit of cooperation in the critical days, we bow in the direction of those women in our Information Department, also—we think they deserve it.

Bishop Hughes May Take Over Leonard Post

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Temporary appointment of Bishop Edwin Holt Evans as resident bishop of the Washington Methodist area—who was in that post from 1932 to 1940—will be recommended at a meeting of the Northeastern Jurisdiction of Methodist bishops in New York June 15

Bishop Hughes

The appointment was indicated at yesterday's sessions of the Baltimore Methodist Conference, embracing churches in the District and Western Maryland, and held at Baltimore's Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

If appointed, Bishop Hughes, now 76, temporarily would succeed the late Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, who was killed in an Iceland plane crash May 3 while touring the war fronts. A permanent successor cannot be appointed until the church jurisdictional conference meets following the next Methodist General Conference in 1944.

Among prominent Washingtonians attending the sessions are Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and Federation of Churches' president; Drs. Horace E. Cromer and John R. Edwards, superintendents of the East and West Washington Methodist Districts, and Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Washington Council of Churchwomen and also of the Baltimore Conference Women's Society of Christian Service.

The annual pastoral appointments will be announced tonight by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, resident bishop of the New York area, presiding.

New Bond Record

The Treasury announced yesterday that war bond sales last month totaling $1,334,984,000 were the highest on record, with one exception, since the beginning of the war savings campaign two years ago.

In April $1,469,000,000 in war bonds of the E, F and G series were sold during the second war loan drive.

Roosevelt Orders Coal Miners To Return to Work Monday

Official Opinion Divided

The President's order stated: "Most of the Nation's mines are closed because of a general strike which has taken place in defiance of the Government of the United States."

Officials were divided on whether the order would provide a basis for ending the strike. Department of Interior officials were said to be reconciled to operating the mines for the duration of the war in the event it failed.

Lewis' only comment on the order was a terse, "I have nothing to say, no comment to make."

The Administration was reported prepared to take additional actions next week, if necessary, including use of troops to police the mine fields, reclassification of able-bodied coal miners of military age who failed to return and examination of the status of miners who are technically aliens. Furloughing of miners now in the armed services to work in the pits was another possible strike-breaking action.

Two Governors Act

However, two State Governors acted ahead of the President to issue "work-or-fight" orders to the miners. Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Alabama directed Alabama Selective Service boards to reclassify all men who have occupational deferment who are not at work on the jobs for which they were deferred by 3 p.m. today. Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee authorized draft boards in his State to reclassify for immediate induction all striking miners within the military age limits.

Meanwhile, Office of War Information officials conferred at the Interior Department to develop a campaign to get the President's message across to the miners. The President's order—only four paragraphs of pointed language—was expected to be posted on placards for display in the mining regions.

War Labor Board officials were obviously elated with the President's action. One board official, who declined to be quoted, said, "it amounts to a blood transfusion to this board."

WLB Staked All on Action

WLB placed its existence in the balance on insisting that no special concessions be given to Lewis as a result of his use of the strike weapon. To prevent the coal operators and miners reaching an agreement for a wage increase while the strike was in progress, WLB directed them Monday to refrain from bargaining until the men returned to work.

Ickes, who had previously recommended a compromise proposal to settle the dispute, objected to the board action and the matter was taken before the President for settlement.

At an hour and a half session in the White House which War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes also attended, the question was thoroughly debated Wednesday afternoon. As previously disclosed in The Post, the President settled the intra-government dispute in favor of Ickes and determined upon the course of action revealed by his order.

A proposal by Ickes that he be allowed to establish the mine rates of pay while the mines were in Government hands was rejected by the President. Ickes was reported to have favored an immediate offer of a $1 per day increase to the miners as part payment of their demand for "portal-to-portal" compensation to get them back to work.

Operators and miners conferred at Hotel Statler at 10 a. m. yesterday in accordance with the rules of their collective bargaining conference, but refrained from discussing the issues in dispute, in accordance with the WLB order. After adjourning for lunch, they reconvened at 3 p. m. and then adjourned until 3 p. m. today.

An hour later, Lewis convened his U. M. W. Policy Committee, giving rise to reports that he was about to make an important announcement on the coal case. The President's action was taken while the committee was in session, but it was understood that the miners received a full report on it.

When the meeting concluded, K. C. Adams, U. M. W. spokesman, announced: "The miners will have nothing to say tonight—no comment at all."

Lewis Might Order Return

Success of the President's order was expected to depend on the reaction of individual miners. Inquiries by the Associated Press in scores of tiny mining "patches" in Pennsylvania and West Virginia brought an almost unanimous response that the strikers would remain idle unless given something concrete.

There was speculation on the possibility that the miners' individual problems would be solved by action by Lewis ordering them to return to their jobs. If the mine leader decided to take such an action—and opinions varied among mine operators and informed officials on whether he would—it was expected that he would endeavor to stage it to make clear that the men were responding to his orders, rather than the President's.

Meanwhile, the Republic Steel Corp. notified Government officials that "we are being forced to shut down one of our two blast furnaces in Birmingham, Ala., immediately because of inadequate coal supply which at present amounts to five days for full operations. We will have to bank the second furnace within another day or two."

A charge by Lewis that the WLB "stop-bargaining" order violated the Wagner Act guaranteeing collective bargaining, brought an outraged retort from Senator Robert Wagner, (Democrat) of New York, sponsor of the National Labor Relations Act, who said it was "a cruel blasphemy of the most sacred rights of free labor" to use the law in justification of what he termed "a most irresponsible and disastrous" work stoppage

"I am using this first opportunity to repudiate and denounce," Wagner said, "the assertion that the magna carta of American labor, the law which guarantees the most sacred freedom of the American workers to associate with his fellows under our democracy, justifies or approves of an action undermining the war effort."

Roosevelt Asked To Act on Prices

President William Green said, "that Brown is meeting the requirements of the situation."

Meanwhile, it was learned that Brown has left for his home at St. Ignace, Mich., on what was described by associates as a 10-day business trip, but was generally regarded as an opportunity to get away from OPA's troubles and ponder the organization's future.

Manning Shaw, Brown's personal secretary, said:

"Mr. Brown is not going up to Ignace to resign and he is not going on OPA business. I expect he hopes he could forget OPA for a few days."

Brown, it was explained, has not been home since January 16, when he became price administrator.

Members of the combined Labor War Board said they did not ask for Brown's removal, but that they did protest the appointment of Lou Maxon as deputy price administrator on hte ground that his policies run counter to rolling back prices, stabilization of prices and effective control.

Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, said he thought the President's reaction was favorable.

Green added that labor feels there is a need "that some specific instructions" be issued and that some definite action must be taken to roll back prices. Labor has suggested that they be pushed back to the May, 1942, level.

Asked how this could be done, Murray said it might be accomplished through subsidies, as was done in England, where the Government appropriated 104 million pounds (about 416 million dollars) annually.

"In a nation spending about 90 billion dollars to run a war," he added, "it is the judgment of labor that our country can appropriate a sum of money of about two billion dollars to roll back these prices and hold them at a level to enable workers to secure for themselves adequate standards, the kind of nutrition and other essentials necessary to maintain their morale."

(Much opposition to use of subsidies in controlling prices has developed in Congress.)

He said the President did not make any definite statement but that he hoped the Chief Executive would go into the administration of OPA and bring about corrections neessary to roll back prices and stabilize them as well as wages.

Asked whether it would not ease the coal crisis if the President were to follow labor's recommendation on food prices, Murray said he believed it would ease the entire situation of all workers and that it was "going to be extremely difficult to control the situation unless a more effective control over these factors is put into effect immediately."

Green said the board also asked Mr. Roosevelt to take steps to get overtime pay for railway employes, particularly the nonoperating workers, after 40 hours work in a week. They get time and one-half now after 48 hours.

Town Crowded For Funerals Of 5 Victims

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writers

Purcellville, Va., June 3.—The largest crowd ever to line Purcellville's streets was packed about Harmony Methodist Church here this afternoon as relatives and friends of A. Morris Love, his wife, Mrs. Ruth Grubb Love, and their son, James, 21, lay in state among banked flowers, the victims of this section's most brutal mass murder.

At the same hour—2 p.m.—another smaller crowd packed into the Hall's Funeral Home, where the funeral of Walter Russell, Love's farm hand, and his wife, Mrs. Catherine Russell, was conducted. They also had been murdered in cold blood on the Love farm.

Crowd Overflows

The old stone church, vine-covered and slate roofed, was filled to its capacity of 500. Another 500 persons crowded among the maples and elms in the churchyard and overflowed into the street.

The throng in attendance was well dressed.

The sadness extended to the voice of the preacher, the Rev. J. C. Murphy, as he began the funeral service with the words:

"Our community has been made sad. . . ."

And in the minister's voice there was extreme sadness, for he had known Mr. and Mrs. Love and James well. Love taught a Bible class, member of the board of trustees and was one of the pillars of the church. Mrs. Love was active in church affairs.

Sarah Love, 23, who teaches school at Aldie, Va., and was the only member of the family to escape the murderous attack, sat dry-eyed through most of the service.

But when the Rev. Mr. Murphy said, "No murderer can wipe out the inheritance of Christianity this family left to the community; their names never can be erased from the serene and beautiful hills of Loudoun County," she broke down and wept.

Other relatives attending the services were Mercer Love of Purcellville, Ernest Love of New York City, and Oscar Love, Albuquerque, N. Mex., all brothers of Love, and Dr. E. C. Grubb, brother of Mrs. Love.

The Rev. Ernest Wolf assisted in the services.

Funeral Procession

Following the Love funeral a 2-mile-long procession of cars wound its way to Lakeview Cemetery just outside Hamilton. There, 1¼ miles from the rich acres A. Morris Love had inherited from his father, the late Fenlon Love, former member of the Virginia Assembly, the three were laid to rest. The cemetery, high on a knoll, overlooks the short hills country of the Blue Ridge Mountains, where all three of the Loves had spent their lives.

There was a cross-section of Loudoun County represented, too, at the Russell funeral, as well as many folks from "across the mountain" in the Berryville section of the Valley of Virginia, the former home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Paul Wellington, pastor of the Purcellville Baptist Church. From there the cortege went through the little towns of Round Hill and Bluemont and Snicker's Gap, across the muddy Shenandoah River to Berryville, where the couple were buried in Berryville Cemetery.

Motorists in Gas Lines Fined for Blocking Traffic

Gas shortage or no gas shortage District police are determined that motorists who form lines at gasoline stations waiting for gas are violating District traffic regulations and will be fined accordingly.

Eighteen motorists were given tickets yesterday for forming a block-long line on Sherman Avenue above Girard Street Northwest on Tuesday while waiting for gasoline at a corner station. All 18 forfeited a $2 collateral.

Police Capt. Clarence Lutz of No. 10 Precinct, said he instructed his men to act after receiving numerous complaints that traffic was being blocked.

Confession Reported in Murder

that the lefthand door of Clatterbuck's car had been smashed and could be opened and closed only with difficulty. This hinged directly with the story of Worth T. Blevens, who found the murdered persons, that the man he had seen leaving the Love farm had gotten in and out of the car on the righthand side to open and close the gates of the lane.

The web of evidence had tightened about Clatterbuck strand by strand. First break in the case came when police learned that Sarah Love, 23, daughter of the murdered farmer and his wife, had known many of the details of dealings Clatterbuck conducted with her father. She was the first person to note that the signature of Clatterbuck's father had been forged on a note the slayer gave Love for a $2500 loan.

Clatterbuck's Confession

Clatterbuck's confession came in a torrent of words after officers who had held him since early last night had grilled him intermittently, confronting him with new evidence, piece by piece.

They told him they knew he had borrowed $2500 from Love, using his father's signature to indorse a note. They told him Love had set a deadline for full payment when the debtor had failed to meet his monthly payments, and the deadline was on Tuesday, the day of the murder.

And they told him they knew Love had threatened to expose the forged indorsement if he did not pay.

Through the night they questioned him at the home of State Policeman Ritter in Leesburg. When morning came they piled him in an automobile and plied him with questions as they drove about the countryside. They pointed out the knots of angry men, still discussing Loudoun's most horrible crime, and they were seen driving slowly through Middleburg, talking earnestly to the suspect.

Finally the great frame of 240-pound Clatterbuck shook with emotion and fatigue.

"Yes, I did it," he said.

Full Confession

The officers obtained a full confession and Clatterbuck's signature, it was declared, and immediately drove to the Love farm, where he reenacted the crime. A short time before, Commonwealth's Attorney Charles A. Harrison had issued a warrant for his arrest on a charge of murder.

A few hours prior to the announcement of the confession, the Commonwealth's attorney had told a Post reporter he did not believe Clatterbuck had committed the murder.

"We've been off on many tangents," he said. "There are many suspects and no substantial evidence against any of them."

Harrison also reconstructed the crime differently than police had first outlined it. He said he was sure Love had been slugged while he was standing beside the picket fence in the front yard, had staggered back to the porch and collapsed in the chair, where the murderer had hit him again.

As for James, the Commonwealth's attorney said he believed the youth had been in the cornfield with Walter Russell and had been called to the house by his mother. There, Harrison said, the killer lay in ambush and bashed the youth on the head, shot Mrs. Love and turned the gun on the son—to make sure. The coroner's inquest showed James had been shot through the heart and that his skull was crushed. Mrs. Love was shot in the heart.

Russell, according to Harrison, was coming in from the field where he had been thinning corn when the murderer struck viciously again, to crush a third skull. Russell also was shot in the heart.

Mrs. Russell Shot

Then the killer went to the tenant house, confronted Mrs. Russell and shot her in the heart and temple.

Just what happened after that was hard for authorities to agree upon.

Alibi Checked

Ever since the disclosure by Sarah Love of Clatterbuck's forged note to her father, the man has been a definite suspect. He was taken into custody early yesterday, questioned and released. Then officers checked his alibi, found that it did not hold water in its entirety and went to his home at Hillsboro, a few miles from Hamilton and Purcellville, to begin their questioning again.

Thus began the night and half day-long grilling that ended with the confession and Clatterbuck's incarceration at Winchester.

Neighbors recalled things which tied in with the murder. Clatterbuck was known to be a crack shot with a rifle. He had won prizes for shooting. Only last night his brother Meredith told reporters, somewhat shamefacedly, that he knew "Bill was on a bad note."

Smith Committee Scrutinizes Subpenaed Ginsburg Records

Part of the mysterious files of David Ginsburg, former chief counsel of the OPA, were under scrutiny yesterday after being delivered in answer to subpena to the Smith Committee of the House investigating acts of executive agencies beyond scope of their authority.

The files were sent here from Ginsburg's home at Huntington, W. Va., after it was disclosed to the committee that Ginsburg had worked until midnight for four nights loading them into his car prior to his induction in the Army.

Thomas I. Emerson, senior associate OPA counsel, who first revealed the whereabouts of the files under committee questioning, and yesterday produced them, said Ginsburg still insisted the files were of a personal nature.

He said he had talked by telephone with Ginsburg, a private at Camp Lee, Va., and that Ginsburg, although maintaining the files were personal, was willing to have the committee see them.

Also produced by OPA officials were parts of the Ginsburg files which had been distributed among seven different attorneys' files and in the general OPA file

Committee investigators have admitted that they are most keenly interested in correspondence between Ginsburg and War Mobilization Director Byrnes concerning proposed OPA legislation, since the committee is seeking to discover whether OPA has exceeded the bounds of authority given it by Congress. The correspondence took place when Byrnes was Supreme Court justice. One letter in which Ginsburg referred to the doubtful legality of an amendment to the Rent Control Act made by OPA has already been entered in the record.

Reporters yesterday were shown six large cardboard boxes containing the files removed by Ginsburg. Labels on folders bore the titles, "Japanese Mobilization," "Lumber," "Sugar," "Iron and Steel Scrap," "Sugar," and "Legislation."

DUNKERQUE ANNIVERSARY

(MAY 27—JUNE 4, 1940)

by JOSEPH AUSLANDER

When the beast from the dark primordial slime
Bellowed his hunger for blood and bone,
When the Czech stood stalwart and sublime
Against the tusks of the mastodon,
When the Pole was gored for the hundredth time,
When the Fleming's furious fate was known,
When the Dutch and the French blazed blood and grime—
England elected to fight alone.

For nine incredible nights and days,
Beneath the pounding of bomb and gun,
Beneath the infernal heat and haze,
Beneath the pitiless blood-drenched sun,
On the Norman beach's glare and glaze,
The weaponless Tommy faced the Hun,
And while we could only gasp and gaze
England elected to fight alone.

When the Stukas droned their savagery,
And it seemed no strength could stop that drone,
A small and a gallant company,
Hurled that hellish armada down,
Wrought an eagle-defended Thermopylae,
Laughing at death from a treacherous throne:
Pillared in flame between sky and sea,

From Beowulf, Alfred and Harold on,
From Arthur and Armstrong and Robin Hood,
This is the breed of Bellerophon,
This is the Lion's fearless brood,
This is the Balaclava blood,
This is the creed of the Camperdown:
When all but the soul is quite subdued,
England elects to fight alone.

Now that we face the foe as one,
The foul implacable fiend, none other,
Eternally cunning, the ruthless Hun,
Now that we stand as brother with brother,
Now that the enemy is known,
Now that we rally round our Mother,
Until the beast in his own blood smother,
England no longer fights alone.

"We will wage that war side by side with you in accordance with the best strategic employment of our forces, while there is breath in our bodies and while blood flows through our veins." . . . Prime Minister Winston Churchill in his address to Congress, May 19, 1943.

In commemoration of those epic nine days which were to decide the destiny of the world, these verses are published here as a contribution to the common cause, by the Advertising Agency, BERMINGHAM, CASTLEMAN & PIERCE, New York.

Women Wanted

Two months ago The Post made an appeal for 250 women to register for the Antiaircraft Volunteers Unit in Washington. The job is particularly suited to married women who have only a few hours in the day to spare, and 200 women answered the call. There still remains an urgent need for 50 more volunteers for this patriotic and interesting service. The Antiaircraft Volunteers form an integral part of our chain of air defenses. The unit is made up of a group of responsible women who work in shifts throughout both day and night. Functioning like the "brain" of the defense system, they receive stimuli from the outside and translate them into action. Their station, designation unknown, is in direct telephonic communication with trained plane spotters who send in signals giving the course, speed, altitude and type of every plane flying over the District. Equipped with earphones, colored arrows and markers, the volunteers plot out on a giant floor map Washington's air traffic minute by minute, hour by hour. Army Air Force officers stand by ready to give the order of attack to fighter squadrons waiting in camouflaged airfields, should an enemy Doolittle make a dash for our Capital.

It would be hard to find another part-time job, open to women, so concretely contributive to the war, one in which each member is rewarded by the knowledge that a soldier would be wearing her earphones and charting her corner of the map if she had failed to volunteer. Any woman between the age of 18 and 45 with a high-school education can qualify. The day shifts work only four hours every third day, and the night shifts work eight hours only every fifth night. The Army solves the problem of transportation by means of its own buses. Slacks and shirts are required, and a badge is provided for identification. Volunteers must be agile and strong enough to do an active period of work, intelligent enough to pass through a short period of training, and conscientious enough to take an oath when they enroll. Here is a vital and interesting job for housewives who are anxious to do their "bit" on their rationed time, or for transplanted servicemen's wives who will find units of Antiaircraft Volunteers in any coastal city where they may be stationed. The esprit de corps and efficiency of the Washington unit has been rated so high that it is called the "show" board of the country. Application may be made at the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office at 2324 F Street Northwest, REpublic 5105.

French Unity

French unity has at last been achieved. The organization of the new French "executive committee" appears to represent an almost complete vindication of the position to which General de Gaulle has held since the invasion of North Africa, or, for that matter, since the armistice of 1940. This committee is a very different sort of body from the "Imperial Council" of military leaders and colonial administrators which General Giraud had originally proposed. Moreover, it seems in its composition wholly free from Vichy influences on the one hand or undue influences of the Anglo-American powers on the other.

Of the seven members, four, including Massigili, Catroux and Philip, may be called Gaullists. M. Philip, elected by the vote of the other six, is considered the representative of the French underground, and to that extent of metropolitan France. He is a Protestant and well known in this country. Although he stands rather to the left in French politics, it would take an extraordinary imagination to make of him a Communist. M. Massigli is also well known here. A professional diplomat and certainly no political extremist, he seemed destined for the same position he held in the French National Committee in London—that is, commissioner of foreign affairs. M. Monnet, the financial expert, and General Georges, lately escaped from France, are considered the Giraudist members.

Both M. Monnet and General Catroux, Fighting French Commander in the Middle East, have the reputation of men gifted at finding formulas in which seemingly divergent points of view can be reconciled. Indeed, the very character and composition of the committee seemed a testimony to General Catroux's powers in this respect. Now, amid all the welter of personal rivalries, jockeyings for power and downright propaganda, it has been impossible to follow the eleventh-hour permutations of the unity conferences. Sufficient that unity has been gained. Let us trust that it will stick till the French people are in a position to make known their wishes.

Still No Strike Law

Congress certainly has not enhanced its prestige by its handling of the so-called anti-strike legislation. Many of the more far-sighted members realized last year that they ought to pass legislation to safeguard the national interest in case strikes threatened to disrupt the war effort. Yet they failed to press the matter. Senator Connally sheepishly laid his measure aside at the request of the President. Actually the Senate did not vote on this issue until the first wartime coal strike was over nearly a month ago. Then the House became strangely afflicted with palsy until John L. Lewis called his second strike.

Is Congress incapable of acting on an issue of such great importance, except under the pressure of emergency? That is the impression which the public will unavoidably get from the conduct of both the Senate and the House. Each has acted only under the compelling force of circumstances. Unquestionably the reluctance of the Administration to approve any legislation on this subject explains this procrastination in large measure. For Secretary of Labor Perkins circulated a petition against the proposed legislation after the Connally bill had been passed by the Senate and the House Military Affairs Committee had reported out the more drastic Smith bill. Apparently the Administration was trying to use the threat of antistrike legislation as an ace in the hole to bring John L. Lewis to terms. If so, it miscalculated the stubbornness of the man with whom it was dealing. Legislation should not depend, moreover, upon the caprice of one individual. Additional power to keep the wheels of war plants turning is needed regardless of the outcome of the coal strike. And this need is not changed by the President's back-to-work order last night.

The important point is that Congress had a responsibility to act without waiting to see whether threats and counterthreats would lead to a crisis. What has become of Congress' resolution to play a more active role in determining national policy? When the present session began, its leaders almost to a man proclaimed the independence of the legislative branch and led us to believe that Congress would meet national issues promptly and courageously without waiting for officials called "bureaucrats" to pull the strings. In the test this much-advertised independence appears to come into play only when prodded by the menace of national disaster.

We think that the Military Affairs Committee blundered when it substituted the Smith bill for the Senate-approved Connally bill. The country was and is faced by an emergency situation. The Connally bill would arm the President in dealing with that emergency. It should not have been cluttered up by provisions aimed at the regulation of labor unions. And the provisions regulating strikes seem to cut across the no-strike policy agreed to by labor and heartily approved by both the President and Congress. But, in any event, the House should have acted on the bill three weeks ago without waiting for a second crisis to force its hand.

Now it appears that even the Administration forces are in favor of the Connally bill. That may be because it is evident that Congress will at last pass some bill, and the Administration would much prefer the Connally bill to the Smith bill. It is late, however, to be passing legislation primarily designed to deal with a strike that is already in progress. Ex post facto laws are not the American method. Regardless of what the belated legislation coming out of this badly mismanaged procedure may be, Congress has missed a great opportunity to restore its reputation for courageous action in the national interest. The regrets over that lost opportunity are likely to be all the more poignant because the public appears to be so wholeheartedly in favor of the course that Congress is following so hesitatingly and so belatedly.

Serial Publication

That lively and engaging periodical, The Congressional Record, has at last succumbed to the spirit of the times and gone in for the publication of serials. Representative Compton White of Idaho, one of its 531 editors, has been contributing an essay throughout the past month on an installment basis. By the end of last week he had come to the twenty-ninth chapter and was drawing close to a peroration. Since he provides no synopsis of earlier installments, those who want to get the gist of his narrative will simply have to thumb through back issues of the Record.

Congressman White's contribution is not an original composition. It has, in fact, appeared before in The Congressional Record itself. It is a speech on "Money—The Most Important Issue in the World Today," with which a certain Senator Cockrell entertained his colleagues for three days running back in 1893. According to Mr White, the money problem is just as muddled now as it was then and this seems as good a means of coping with it as any contemporary palaver—and a lot less trouble.

If this sort of serial story proves a circulation builder for the Record, there can of course be no objection to it. Possibly Congressmen will clamor for the next installment. It would not be altogether amiss, however, for the editors of this publication to take into account the cost of printing—and in paper, a commodity rumored to be extremely scarce these days. Mr. White's daily exposition of the world's most important issue in 1853 has been consuming, on an average, a little over two pages every day—at a cost of about $100 a day. If it is going to publish articles at such expense, perhaps Congress ought to make them required reading for all its members.

Toll Of U-Boats

"The final phase of the U-boat war," says Winston Churchill in the The World Crisis of Germany's submarine activities in 1918, "saw the roles of the combatants reversed. It was the U-boat and not the merchant ship that was hunted."

Something like the same situation is beginning to be true today. In May, according to A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the British Admiralty, U-boats destroyed were probably greater than U-boats brought into service. So Mr. Alexander confirms the impressions gathered from our more cautious spokesmen. The fact is of extraordinary importance. Hitherto the assumption has been that during the spring and summer months of this year and possibly well into the fall the Allies would have to depend on increased shipbuilding as their principal means of overcoming the ravages caused by the U-boats. That assumption must now be revised. If we are now building more ships than ever, which is the case, and are also, as Mr. Alexander suggests, sinking more submarines than Germany is building, then our tonnage will take a steep rise. Accordingly our bottleneck of bottlenecks may be broken before even the most optimistic had dared to hope.

During the past two months, says Mr. Alexander, the number of U-boats operating in the Atlantic has decreased. This was only partly due to the increased rate of destruction at sea. It was also due to the air raids by the R. A. F. and the United States Army Air Force on submarine plants, assembly yards and operational bases in the Bay of Biscay. Whatever the individual effect of these various antisubmarine measures may have been, the net result has certainly been gratifying. It means that Germany is losing the Battle of the Atlantic as she has lost the Battle of Africa and is on her way to losing the Battle of Europe. At a time when Germany's submarine strength is declining, our strength in escort vessels, reconnaissance planes, destroyers and small carriers useful for convoy work is steadily increasing.

It is a fair assumption, therefore, that an increasingly heavy toll of U-boats will be taken each week and month from now on. So the supplying of our bases in Britain, Iceland, North Africa and the Middle East will now become progressively easier. By the same token the day when Europe will be invaded will be advanced. Admiral Doenitz and his Fuehrer cannot be having very pleasant dreams these days.

Food Hopes

The most significant feature of the declaration of principles recommended for approval of the nations participating in the United Nations Food Conference is the emphasis placed upon the need for expanded production of food products. That need is self-evident. As the conference report declares, there has never been enough food for the health of the people. Nevertheless, for years the food problem has been viewed largely from the standpoint of producers who have tried to find a solution for their economic difficulties by placing restrictions on output in order to raise prices. Indeed, only a year ago, after many months of conferring, delegates to the International Wheat Conference, to which the United States was a party, drafted proposals calling for the establishment of production controls to minimize the effects of an accumulation of excessive supplies of wheat.

Much has happened even in the brief space of time intervening to shift the emphasis from production to consumption. Thus the delegates to the Food Conference who have been studying distribution problems declare that "we must keep in mind at all times the goal of a progressively expanding economy of plenty instead of a contracting economy of scarcity." This new approach requires intensive study of plans for increasing consumer purchasing power as a means of expanding market outlets for food products. Undoubtedly that is the economically sound approach. However, the expansion of markets by raising the general level of consumer well being presents much more formidable obstacles of a practical and political nature than crude devices for raising prices by plowing under crops or destroying excess supplies.

It can be affirmed with certainty that progress toward world abundance of essential foods can only be achieved by a high order of international cooperation combined with unremitting efforts to raise the standard of living in all parts of the world.

GERMANY, 1943

They all shall take their fill of meat,
Be satisfied with bread,
Of proper tribute shall they eat;
So Hermann Goering said.

The children in the captive lands
Lie hungry through the night,
While those who bore them watch the sands
Ebb to the morning light.

One nation's people eat the strength
Of all the lands around,
Where shadows walk, to fall at length
And feed the hungry ground.

With emptiness the board is set
And bitter tear-brewed wine:
There is a meal that none forget
At which the damned must dine.

June 1940

By Mark Sullivan

Two Anniversaries

THERE ARE, this early June, two anniversaries. By them, the war can be measured, its present status estimated. The first is the evacuation of Dunkirk. So far as a specific date can be fixed as the anniversary of Dunkirk, it is the day it ended, the day it was known to be successful. That was June 4, 1940.

The evacuation had begun nine days earlier, at 3 p. m., May 26. At that hour the first wave of boats set out from Dover to cross the Channel and bring the British army back. That strange armada, more than a thousand craft, hastily assembled from anything that would float—including little motorboats built for quiet inland streams, and ancient merchant hulks regarded as obsolete—that was the sign of England's ability to pull herself together in time of desperate danger. After nine days of crossing and recrossing the Channel, under circumstances of bitter hardship, the evacuation was completed at 3:40 in the morning of June 4. At that hour, the last ships to leave Dunkirk, the destroyers Express and Shikari, set out with the final thousand of the troops, completing the evacuation of an army of 337,000.

That a successful evacuation should be the cornerstone for the winning of a world-wide war, may seem strange—at the time, not many thought of it as that. But today Dunkirk, as a military feat, and as a turning point in world history, is recognized at once by military judgment and by the literature that is beginning to celebrate it as an epic event.

FOREVER INCLUDED in that literature, so long as the English language shall live—and it will live as the language of a major nation only because of Dunkirk—will be the words Prime Minister Winston Churchill uttered in his speech to the House of Commons the day the evacuation was complete, June 4. First he recited the calamity that had been escaped: "The whole root and core and brain of the British army . . . seemed about to perish upon the field or be led into an ignominious and starving captivity." Then he recited their rescue "out of the jaws of death and shame, to their native land and to the tasks which lie ahead."

Then came that declaration of resolution and faith which will be quoted as long as Shakespeare, and for the same reason—because it is an eloquent expression of the character of the English people: "We shall prove ourselves once again able to defend our island home . . . if necessary for years, if necessary alone. That is the resolve of His Majesty's government. That is the will of Parliament and the nation. . . Even though large tracts of Europe and many old and famous states have fallen or may fall, we shall not flag or fail. We shall go on to the end."

And then the moving eloquence of Churchill's closing words: "We shall defend our island, whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender."

THOSE WERE Churchill's words, to and about his people. For someone to tell adequately the part Churchill himself played, we shall have to wait. It is not enough to say of Churchill merely that

He nothing common did or mean
Upon that memorable scene.

Churchill's role was more than that. To express Churchill's part as loftily as it was, we must wait for someone with his and Shakespeare's gift of words. Here, it is enough to say simply that had Churchill, in his post of high decision, been a man who, for as much as half an hour, cowered or was afraid, England would have been lost. And had England been conquered by Hitler, what might have followed is for the most somber imagination to speculate on.

Turn now to the other anniversary—and this is to turn from the lion to the jackal. It was on June 11, 1940, that Mussolini, seeing that Hitler had conquered France, and supposing he would conquer England too, skulked in to grab what bits of the kill the wolf might leave. On the third anniversary next week, Mussolini will be slinking to some den of refuge he cannot find. To say that Italy today is far worse off than had she never entered the war, is to say much too little. Italy's dilemma today is of a desperateness and a strangeness hardly equaled in history. The fact, gaunt to Mussolini, is that any fate that might come to Italy by surrender to the Allies would be infinitely preferable to seeing Hitler win. For in the latter case Italy would be a scorned satellite, hardly happier than the conquered countries. This condition, pointing toward surrender as the better fate, is known to every intelligent person in Italy—and is a vital factor in the present military situation.

Lessons Of Attu

By Paul Schubert

Pacific Preview

AT THE end, the last pocket of Japanese troops came out charging, yelling their gibberish war cries, hopped up with the self-importance of men about to perform conscious mass heroics. The eyes of their Emperor were upon them. Future generations would exalt them. They were worthy descendants of yesterday's warriors.

The American troops, dirty and weary after a month of fighting in which nature was often a greater enemy than the Jap, faced the charge with grim confidence. The charging Japs were doomed—had been, from the beginning. All our calculations had been sound. We had come in to the island with all the advantages. The one thing the enemy might have done to upset the plan had not materialized—the relief expedition in force, that would have turned this small fight into a major knock-down and drag-out. These troops now coming out to die might just as well have surrendered days ago, when hard-headed common sense must have told them that they didn't have a chance.

YET HERE they were . . . still treacherous as snakes, pulling the last bit of stamina out of their exhausted bodies——

Machine guns began to chatter. Tommy guns barked. A mortar lobbed its missile through the air, and over on the left flank the hand grenades were flying. For the last time on Attu it was kill or be killed. If that was what the Japs wanted, let 'em have it.

So the final quarter hour played itself out, a battle of annihilation.

Americans fought this way, back in the last century, against the Indians, in countless fights when quarter was neither asked nor given. When he must, the "white man" can meet and outdo the savage both in ferocity and determination, and he has proven it time and time again as Europeans have spread over this earth since the great era of exploration and settlement began.

True, never before has the "native" been so well equipped, so cohesively organized. This struggle is a major, first-rank war, with half the world as a prize. It is a war to determine whether the great era of European expansion by violence has come to an end at last, stopped and beaten back by its own brand of violence . . . or whether, after one last conquest, it can evolve into the spreading "civilization" of self-government under law and the order of a beneficent police power.

ON ATTU as on Guadalcanal, the Japanese were wiped out—met by superior force, superior determination, met by men able and willing to fight it out and win.

From a military point of view, what did the Japanese gain by their stand on Attu?

On Attu, as at Guadalcanal, they gained time. They forced us to pay that one price for the bleak island. The job required time because our system of annihilation is one of methodical, calculated power of machines and explosive. Our philosophy of warfare has become one of gaining the objective at a minimum cost in blood and human flesh. Having based our civilization upon the importance of the individual, we undertake to win our wars without turning individuals into "cannon fodder." The casualty of a private soldier becomes just as important to us as the casualty of a general. We face the conquest of an island like Attu as an engineering job in very much the same way that we might set out to build a dam in some distant spot. The Japanese represent obstacles to be overcome, and we are prepared to do what it takes to overcome them.

BUT STILL we fight our kind of war, not theirs.

Attu is a preview of the Pacific warfare to come.

We shall win this war, but all the way through it—at least, for a long time to come—we shall win it at the price of spending time in the extermination of Japanese forces, man by man . . . until at last it penetrates the Japanese mentality that we are prepared, if need be, to exterminate the last man in the Japanese islands.

It will take us time, and great resolution to do this. But it can be done—and the war must be fought out.

As a matter of fact, the Japanese "last-stand" mentality plays into our hands. The enemy's behavior is strictly patterned. We can anticipate what he will do and make our plans accordingly.

Our position would be far more difficult should the enemy grasp the impossibility of his task under present circumstances — should he "collapse" as the Germans collapsed in 1918 . . . and then begin to use the "peace" to plot new Pacific wars. Germany has invaded France three times in 70 years. We must see to it that there is never another Pearl Harbor.

Sea Gull's "Rights"

It is silly for us in northern California and Oregon to go without venison, because deer are so plentiful in the hills that they eat up all the feed so men have very little for cattle. If a man kills one without a hunting license he gets arrested, fined, and he lets the deer eat up his orchards and everything he needs for cattle. I do not exaggerate—it's true. I live where no fruit or berries are raised, but we do have a beach where the sand is full of clams.

I watched sea gulls eat all clams they saw. They flew up with a clam and dropped it on the hard sand to break it, then ate it. I had a clam license but was not strong enough to dig them, so I ventured to pick up one before the sea gulls got it. It was half an inch under size (only 5 inches wide) and the game warden came after me on his motorcycle, and I dropped it. I tried it again and it happened again. I am 73 years old. Why can't the State allow old folks who can't dig (like me) to have the same right the sea gulls have to take clams thrown out because too small by half an inch. The clams can't get back where they came from, but lie in the sun while tide goes out, and die. The above is the absolute truth on beach between Pismo and Oceano, where I live. F. F.

Mission To Moscow

Attending the cinema is so rarely an educational experience and so frequently a mortifying one, that attending the fine exposition of Mr. Davies contained in "Mission to Moscow" is in the nature of a shock, but a very welcome one. We have had films before that have dazzled by virtue of their honesty and integrity which superseded commercial drives—like "The Grapes of Wrath," "Black Legion" and "Citizen Kane"—but these have been the exception and each new one evokes a sense of gratitude and a plea for continued recognition of American intelligence and taste.

For me, "Mission," even in the face of some sincere and realistic war plays lately, flares up like a rocket in the dark. Many of us are squirming at the vital truths it expresses, made forcibly and heartrendingly clear by the graph of contemporary events, but few of us will emerge not proud that this revelation is produced in America at this time and unhindered by those very maleficent and powerful "adverse" forces portrayed in the story.

OPA

Women may crab a lot about the OPA, but the intelligent ones know that it's a bulwark against inflation which our country can ill afford to lose. For Congress to kill it in order to transfer its power to Food Administrator Chester C. Davis would be childish—knocking down one house just to build another.

Either we have inflation or we have subsidies. The latter is more economical for the Government, the consumer, and for labor. If we get inflation instead of subsidies you will see who is running the country, for naturally the farm Astors, processors, wholesalers, and food brokers are the ones who want high prices. The small farmer never gets the benefit of high prices. The spread is exhausted before it gets to him.

The Big Boys remember the lush years of 1918-22 when there was no OPA and when sugar rose from 5 to 25 cents per pound, 500 per cent. No wonder the Congress killed Henderson and is now out to kill the whole "dastardly bureau" that dares to act in the interest of the war effort and of the consumers; that not only is trying to "hold the line" as the President decreed but actually promises to yield to labor's demand that prices be rolled back to September, 1942.

We women understand that the strength of the black market has been largely due to our own weakness since we hold the purse strings and can make the black marketeer look pretty foolish by merely refusing to buy. And you, Mr. Editor, can help a lot too by doing all you can to publicize the legal ceilings and to encourage the public to refuse to pay more. For all that you have done and will do, we thank you. Ulster Men

Four Northern Irish girls wrote to Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, leader of the victorious British Eighth Army, congratulating him on the achievements of his men.

An airgraph letter was received by the girls at Ballyclare, Northern Ireland, part of which is as follows:

"I am proud to be an Ulsterman and to know you are following our operations with interest."

From Revolutionary times until now "Ulstermen" have been in the thick of the fight for liberty, civil and religious. The Valley Forge line bristled with Ulstermen; World War No. 1 found them on the right side, while altogether too many men in southern Ireland arrayed themselves on the side of the enemy of democracy.

All-Out Arlene Encounters Difficulty

All Out Arlene says that the business of releasing a man for front line duty isn't always what it is cracked up to be. "The boy I was to release for combat was in no hurry, and he gave me a little trouble," said Arlene today.

"The main purpose of the women's military services is to free men for fighting," she explained. "And in 99 cases out of 100 it works out okay. But the deuce they detailed me to free had a swell office and he liked it. I reported and announced that I was releasing him. 'From what?' he asks me. You talk like I was a member of the Brooklyn outfield.'

"'I'm releasing you from home duty for combat,' I told him. He wants to know what combat. I tell him his guess is as good as mine. 'You've heard of the WAACS?' I ask."

"'In a general way,' he replies. 'But I thought they was just being drilled to learn how to live in one hat and like it.'"

"'You're behind in your education,' I explain. 'Our main purpose is to relieve men like you.'"

"He tells me he will be relieved if I go away and forget the whole matter."

"I ask him, 'Don't you want to be free for combat?' and he says, 'I wanted to when they first stuck me in this mystic maze of desks, telephones and filing cabinets, but I've got used to it. Try the third office down the hall on the left. Maybe there's somebody there who can't wait.'"

"The more I try to explain the tougher he gets. 'Lissen, sister,' he says to me, 'I have made no application to get released for anything. Nobody's brought up the subject so far except you. And who are you? I never saw you before, girlie. You blow in here in a natty uniform all set to take over my home work while I grab a gun and start looking for hand to hand combat almost without warning.'"

"He is all upset about it. 'You girls are getting yourselves in wrong with this yen to free the office help for front-line battling,' he argues. 'A lot of guys who always liked dames are suddenly beginning to hate them. You and your releases! Now scram, sister, and forget this combat stuff before we take to hand to hand fighting right here on the premises! Beat it! Just leave your card. If I ever want to be released I'll let you know.'"

"What did you do?" we asked Arlene. "It must have been embarrassing."

"Oh, he was just kidding," she explained. "It was a put-up job. Just when I'm starting to dress him down, he busts out laughing and admits all. He not only turned over his desk to me, but left some sandwiches for me in the top drawer."

Waves

Two of my buddies left for overseas duty not long ago. They asked me to look in on their sister, who joined the WAVES and is now stationed in Washington. Certain conditions exist about her situation and that of her companions which I would like to describe.

1. The girls are allowed $1.50 per day for food, yet this is exactly one-half of what is actually required for three decent meals in Washington nowadays. The result is that the girls are undernourished. They have just about one fair meal per day.

2. The girls must feed themselves wherever and whenever they can. They work very hard—as much as 16 hours per day. When they do work the eight-hour shift they get through at hours when the restaurants are not serving regular meals, for they work on 24-hour shifts by crews. As a result they are forced to eat in the usual "joint" that is open at all hours of the night. Although there is a cafeteria in the building where this WAVE works, it is not open during the hours when she can get a meal there.

3. The girls must travel several squares alone late at night or very early in the morning. The Navy should see to it that the girls get to work and back home safely.

4. Most of their day is spent at work and in finding a pleace to eat; they have only a few hours left for sleep. When they work nights they sleep during the day—yet no effort is made to see to it that they are allowed to rest undisturbed. They are forced to get up for fire drill a few hours after having gone to bed, for instance.

French Empire

By Ernest K. Lindley

De Gaulle Pulls A Fast One

MARCEL PEYROUTON submitted his resignation as governor-general of Algeria in two identical letters: one to General de Gaulle and the other to General Giraud. De Gaulle and Giraud are supposed to head jointly the executive committee which is to rule the French Empire until the people of France can be given the opportunity to reestablish a government of their own choosing.

LINDLEY

General de Gaulle promptly accepted Peyrouton's resignation and assigned him, in his capacity of captain of colonial infantry, to the Middle Eastern Command. Hardly less promptly, his staff called in the foreign correspondents at Algiers and gave them the story. They sent it out. The next morning they discovered, from the French press in Algiers, that General Giraud separately had accepted Peyrouton's resignation and also, in accordance with Peyrouton's expressed wish, had made him a captain. But Giraud asked Peyrouton to continue to serve as governor-general until the organization of the executive committee had been completed.

Why the correspondents sent their stories without checking with Giraud or with Robert Murphy and Harold MacMillan, the American and British diplomatic representatives in French Africa, requires explanation. On the surface, it would appear to be lax reporting; but there may have been extenuating circumstances, such as the lateness of the hour, or inability to make contact with the other authorities.

GENERAL GIRAUD is the French civil and military head in North Africa. He had appointed Peyrouton. It was entirely appropriate for him to accept the resignation and to make him a captain in the French army. It was also proper for him to ask Peyrouton to continue to serve temporarily until the formation of the new French executive committee could be completed and the committee chose Peyrouton's successor.

Either Giraud, or the executive committee, or Giraud and De Gaulle together as joint heads of the executive committee, might appropriately have acted on Peyrouton's resignation. But it was clearly outside De Gaulle's province to take action alone. It was an assumption, or usurpation, of power. In so far as the facts are known, it would have to be called a sharp political trick. Certainly it is not what would be expected of a man interested in obtaining and holding the confidence of the Allies of France or in uniting France and the empire behind the prosecution of the war. It bore the earmarks, rather, of unbridled and poorly principled ambition for personal power.

Merrill Mueller, Newsweek's correspondent in Algiers, reported over the National Broadcasting Company the following morning that De Gaulle's action had "roused Giraud as nothing else has since he took over in North Africa." This would not be surprising. Giraud, a soldier first, has freely admitted his own ineptitude as a politician. Among his mistakes may have been the original appointment of Peyrouton, in the first instance. The main difference between Peyrouton and some of the old Vichy adherents left in power in North Africa was that the latter had been there all along and, in some instances, probably could not have been removed without the risk of internal turmoil which might have embarrassed Allied military operations. Peyrouton was imported after Giraud took over.

DURING THE last several months, Giraud has worked patiently toward an understanding with De Gaulle. Judging from outward appearances, Giraud yielded a great many points—some of which may not have furthered the interests of France but seemed necessary to appease De Gaulle. Considerable progress had been made before De Gaulle arrived in Algiers Sunday, but several difficulties remained to be settled. After arriving in Algiers, De Gaulle apparently tried to pull off a sort of coup d'etat, undermining Giraud and attempting to set himself up as a provisional French government.

De Gaulle's action in the Peyrouton resignation illustrates why American officials have had a great deal of trouble in getting along with him and do not altogether trust him.

De Gaulle has some fine qualities. He was a brilliant prophet of mobile, armored warfare. He kept faith in Britain, an Allied victory and the ultimate liberation of France when most of the old French leaders folded up. The British took these qualities and built him up into a flaming symbol of the unconquerable spirit of France. Undoubtedly De Gaulle has prestige in France, and the French underground movements, or most of them, connect with him and his French National Committee in London.

But in one way or another De Gaulle seems to have identified himself the modern male counterpart of Jeanne d'Arc. In a mentality of that type, it is difficult to draw the line between sheer lust for power and the sense of mission. But whatever the psychological explanation, De Gaulle seems determined to rule, by whatever means he can contrive.

The British government has considerable investment in De Gaulle's prestige. The British people, and many Americans, remember his gallantry and determination in 1940 and 1941, when the outlook was black. But there are other Frenchmen whose loyalty to France is no less than De Gaulle's, and whose political judgment is considerably more trustworthy. Besides, in the interest of France and the Allied cause alike, it is desirable that France be represented by men with whom her Allies can deal with confidence.

2-Term Limit Is Proposed

Hot Political Issue

An amendment to the Constitution limiting the term of office of all future Presidents to two terms yesterday was proposed in the Senate by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, North Carolina Democrat.

Bailey denied his resolution was "political" or that it was either aimed at or could stop a fourth-term campaign by President Roosevelt.

But the resolution was promptly referred to a subcommittee for hearings by Senate Judiciary Chairman Frederick Van Nuys and inevitably will become the center of a fourth-term debate.

Bailey told reporters that he was simply interested in providing a constitutional barrier against acceptance of President Roosevelt's third-term election as a precedent for any future third-term try.

"Obviously the Constitution could not be amended before the next Presidential election and if the President is reelected this would not oust him," Baley said. "But of course it would prevent a fifth term, or a third term for any other President."

Senate Republicans, centering around Senator Hugh A. Butler of Nebraska, are known to have been considering presentation of a two-term amendment for some time, but are expected to hold off now that the move has been made by a Democrat with a long record of support of "constitutional principles."

The subcommittee appointed by Chairman Van Nuys of the Judiciary Committee to consider the Bailey resolution will be headed by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada. McCarran said it was a matter that "should be seriously considered" and he will shortly call a preliminary meeting of his subcommittee.

Others named to the subcommittee were two administration Democrats, Connally of Texas and McFarland of Arizona, and two Republicans, Austin of Vermont and Ferguson of Michigan.

McCarran said hearings on the bill will be "wide open."

For weeks the move has been under discussion by a small number of Senate Democrats. Informal polls of the Judiciary Committee are understood to have been taken, indicating such a resolution might be favorably reported by a margin of 10 to 8.

There was little likelihood the proposal could win the necessary two-third vote of the Senate but it could be debated for days, spotlighting the fourth term issue, and possibly in the end muster a majority vote.

While the resolution in itself could not block a fourth term, some interested Senators pointed out that any discussion of it might prove a powerful fourth term deterrent, and raise storm warnings of a split on the issue within Democratic ranks.

Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who has centered his preliminary Republican campaign on the fourth term as an issue, immediately indorsed the Bailey resolution. Spangler said it "would be a great thing for the Nation" if Congress adopts and the Senate ratifies it, and that it was "in line with the views of all our great statesmen for more than 150 years regardless of political affiliations."

The proposed Bailey amendment reads:

"Section 1. No person shall be chosen as President for any term, or be eligible to hold the office of President during any term, if such person shall have been elected to and shall have held the office of President during the whole or any part of each of two prior terms; but this article shall not prevent any person who may hold the office of President during the term within which this article is ratified from holding such office for the remainder of such term.

"Section 2. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission to the States by the Congress."

Early this year similar resolutions were circulated in a number of State Legislatures, and four State Legislatures—Indiana, Michigan, Iowa and Illinois—memorialized Congress to initiate a two-term amendment.

High School Courses in Sex Education Favored by Big Vote in National Survey

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 3.—The increase of sex delinquency in wartime, particularly among school girls, has given rise to proposals that courses in sex education be given in American high schools.

While many parents think that instruction in such matters is properly the responsibility of the home rather than of the school, nevertheless public sentiment stands four to one at present in favor of courses in secondary schools dealing with sex matters.

A Nationwide survey finds that the idea appeals especially to people living in the larger cities, where delinquency rates are in many cases increasing.

To obtain an index of public opinion on the matter, more than 200 interviewers for the Institute conducted a survey among a true cross-section of the population from coast to coast on the following issue:

"It has been suggested that a course in sex education be given to students in high schools. Do you approve or disapprove of this plan?"

The results are:

Approve	68%
Disapprove	16
No Opinion	16

Sex education courses have been under consideration in the senior high schools of Washington, D. C., and a number of other cities across the country.

It is interesting to note that the women of the country are more in favor of such courses than the men. The survey finds that 66 per cent of all men approve the idea, and 69 per cent of all women.

There is substantial support for sex education in schools throughout all geographical sections, although the vote in the South is lower than elsewhere.

The sectional vote follows:

	Approve	Disapprove	Undec.
N. Eng. & M. Atl.	72%	16%	12%
E. Cent.	72	15	13
W. Cent.	65	17	18
South	61	16	23
Far West	71	14	15

In general, the larger the size of community the more sentiment exists for school courses in the subject. Farm areas are least in favor, the vote being 56 per cent, and cities over 100,000 most in favor, the vote there being 79 per cent.

The proposal has more appeal to young people than to their elders, as the following table shows:

	Approve	Disapprove	Undec.
Age 21-29	77%	13%	10%
30-49	69	15	16
50 and over	61	20	19

New U.S.S. Cogswell Named In Honor of Father and Son

By the Associated Press

Bath, Me., June 3—The destroyer Cogswell, named for a father and son, will be christened by two sponsors when it is launched Saturday at the Bath Iron Works.

On one side of the ship's bow Mrs. Donald C. Bingham, wife of a Navy captain and daughter of the late Rear Admiral James Kelsey Cogswell, U. S. N., will break a bottle while on the other, Mrs. Francis Cogswell, widow of Admiral Cogswell's son, Capt. Francis Cogswell, U. S. N., simultaneously will break another. Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Cogswell reside at 313 Rosemary Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Still upholding the Cogswell family's Navy traditions is a grandson of Admiral Cogswell, James K. Cogswell 3d, a midshipman at Northwestern University.

Rear Admiral Cogswell, a native of Milwaukee, Wis., died in 1908 after 46 years in the Navy which included service aboard the U. S. S. Oregon during its record-breaking cruise around the Horn and subsequent participation in the Battle of Santiago. He was stationed at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1884-86 and 1902.

The admiral's son, Captain Cogswell, born at Portsmouth, was commanding officer of the U. S. S. Houston at his death at Bremerton, Wash., in 1939. He was awarded the Navy Cross in World War I for distinguished service as commanding officer of the U. S. S. Fanning and the U. S. S. McDougal in the fight against U-boats.

Slurs on Morality of WAACS Nazi-Inspired, Rep. Rogers Says

By Ann Cottrell

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts, author of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps bill, emphatically denied yesterday rumors casting reflections on the morality of the members of the WAAC, saying that the War Department had informed her that the reports are totally without foundation.

Representative Roger's indignation over the whispering campaign, which, she said, is "Nazi inspired," was shared by other women members of Congress, one of whom even suggested that a congressional investigation be requested to expose the rumors and prove them groundless. The majority of the Congresswomen interviewed by the New York Herald Tribune seemed to think that the rumors, which affect the other women's services as well as the WAAC, are a part of a German propaganda attack on American womanhood.

While the rumors, such as the report that a number of WAACS were returned from North Africa because of pregnancy, have been passed about in casual gossip, attempts to imply misconduct on the part of the women's corps have been aired recently on the House floor.

One of the most vocal opponents of legislation affecting the women in uniform is Representative Beverley M. Vincent (Democrat) of Kentucky. During debate last week on the bill to take the WAAC into the Army, he misinterpreted a newspaper account that WAACS are living in convents in North Africa to indicate that girls had to be given protection from the men in the vicinity.

Representative Vincent's previous opposition to a measure to allow the WAVES to serve overseas resulted today in a similar bill, with several restrictions, being introduced in he House by Representative Margaret Chase Smith (Republican) of Maine. Her bill provides for overseas service for the WAVES, but carries the proviso, "No such member who is qualified to fill an available billet in the Navy Department proper at Washington, shall be assigned to duty outside the continental United States."

Rep. Cox Believed Secure in Job Of Making FCC Investigation

By the Associated Press

Apparently secure in his assignment as chairman of a House Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission despite FCC protests on his qualifications, Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, said yesterday he would press the inquiry.

"I don't intend to be intimidated and run away from the task," declared the Georgian.

Meanwhile, the House Judiciary Committee took no action on a petition by Clifford J. Durr, FCC member, that Cox be disqualified as a member of the special committee set up to investigate the commission.

Judiciary members expressed doubt that this committee possessed jurisdiction to pass on other committee appointments made by Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas, who named Cox to head the FCC probing body. Rayburn referred Durr's petition to the Judiciary committee and there were strong indications it would be shelved.

Cox said today the object of the inquiry is "to free all media of communications from the despotic control which the commission has set up."

"It is not going to be a smear," he added, "nor will it be a whitewash. The inquiry will be fair, dignified and thorough."

Durr alleged in his petition that Cox had a personal interest in the investigation because of ownership of stock in station WALB at Albany, Ga., now involved in a proceeding pending before FCC, and that prior to his appointment as chairman of the investigating committee Cox "had already prejudged and condemned the commission, its personnel and activities, and had shown himself to be biased, prejudiced and lacking in the objectivity of mind requisite for a member of such committee."

FSA Funds Restored

Senate Amends Bill

Funds for the Farm Security Administration, wiped out by the House in a move to abolish the agency, yesterday were restored by a Senate Appropriations subcommittee in an 850-million-dollar Agriculture appropriation bill.

Returned to the bill was $29,607,000 for FSA administrative expenses, seven million dollars shy of budget estimates, and borrowing authority for $97,500,000 in rural rehabilitation loans. Also restored was $1,300,000 to administer the Bankhead Farm Tennant Act, also 30 million dollars for tenant purchase loans.

But in overriding the House slash the subcommittee hedged the Farm Security Administration around with restrictions that Senator Russell, (Democrat) of Georgia, subcommittee chairman, said will "confine FSA to the purposes for which it was designed."

Restrictions Set Up

Among the restrictions:

A prohibition on FSA purchase or leasing or land.

A ban on loans to farm cooperatives, limiting loans solely to individual needy farmers and restricting these to a $2500 maximum in each case.

Recommendations for liquidation as soon as possible of about 195 FSA cooperative, resettlement and subsistence homestead projects.

"We want to get FSA out of the project business as soon as possible," said Russell. "It has been a millstone around the agency's neck. The other limitations will help get FSA back to what it was designed to be, an agency to make rehabilitation loans to needy individual farmers and to help them get on their feet."

Vetoed Bankhead Bill

Farm bloc efforts to revive in modified form the Bankhead bill vetoed by the President, meanwhile were reflected in a subcommittee authorization for Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama to offer a milder version of his bill as an amendment on the floor.

The Bankhead amendment approved by the subcommittee would omit soil conservation benefit payments to farmers as a farm income factor in fixing price ceilings. The original bill vetoed by the President as highly inflationary left all Government benefits out of farm price reckonings.

Among the increases in House appropriations was a 100 million dollar boost for soil conservation payments, which the House had cut to 300 million dollars. The 400 million dollar Senate figure is still 50 million dollars under the budget estimate.

Increased from $3,500,000 to $7,818,000 were funds to continue insurance on cotton and wheat crops by the Federal Crop Insurance Corp., which the House proposed to liquidate. The subcommittee rejected an attempt to restore House-eliminated appropriation of 100 million dollars for incentive payments to farmers. All of the subcommittee changes must go before the full Senate Appropriations Committee for approval Saturday.

Seaman From D. C. Missing in Action, Navy Reports

Edward Joseph Caffrey, who enlisted in the Navy three days after war was declared, was reported missing in action by the Navy Department yesterday. In addition to the 12 casualties announced, four men previously listed as missing were reported dead.

Caffrey, 20, the son of James Joseph Caffrey of 4509 P Street Northwest, is a native of New York City. After attending Gordon Junior High School here, he was employed by Woodward & Lothrop. He trained at Norfolk, Va., and went overseas last March. Two stepbrothers are also with the service: Bruce Longworth, Merchant Marine, and Lawrence Longworth, Army.

The new list brings to 23,204 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7365 dead, 4706 wounded and 11,133 missing.

Job Bill Seen Passing

McKellar Will Seek Vote Today

Senate leaders predict passage today of the McKellar bill to subject 30,000 or more Federal jobs to Senate review, after preliminary debate yesterday in which Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois denounced the measure as a "patronage grab" which faced a certain veto by President Roosevelt.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, said he would press for a vote today, and that he hoped to obtain it. Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, an opponent of McKellar's version and author of an amendment to take the Tennessee Valley Authority outside the scope of the bill conceded that the backers of the measure appeared to "have the votes to do whatever they wanted."

There was a possibility however, that the McKellar bill might be left without a vote today, and be pushed aside next week to make way for the Agriculaure appropriation bill.

Besides the Hatch amendment, the McKellar bill faces a fight on a restricted substitute, sponsored by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming and others, which was estimated to provide Senate review for around 10,000 to 15,000 Federal officials.

This estimate was given by Senator O'Mahoney in urging that Congress keep clear the distinction between employes and policy-making "officers" of the Government. "The whole issue here," said O'Mahoney, "is whether or not the Senate should undertake the detailed work of passing on the qualifications of a vast horde of employes who exercise no policy-making power."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, observing that he was in sympathy with the principles of the bill, asked at one point whether it offered him any way to "get at Harry Hopkins." The question was left unanswered on the floor.

Adoption of Program Ends Sessions of Food Conference

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., June 3.—The United Nations food conference closed today with adoption of a program aimed at paving the way toward a world free from want, and expressions of confidence that the parley' work had brought nearer the day of victory.

The program was embodied in a declaration of principles and 30 resolutions which charged governments with responsibility for promoting such agricultural and food distribution programs as would help all peoples toward a standard of nutrition that would make them, in the words of the United States delegate, "strong enough to be free."

The most immediate tangible result of the conference promised to be early establishment in Washington of an interim commission with the task of arranging for creation of a permanent international agricultural authority to guide a program for world abundance.

Speakers at the brief final sessions emphasized that this was only the beginning of a drive to secure adequate food for all men, and that meanwhile the urgent task was to win the war and save millions of people from tyranny and starvation.

Chairman Richard Law of the British delegation, in moving the adoption of the "final act" embodying all conference recommendations, suggested that "there is not one of us here who will live to see the end of our work."

Soviet Russia's chief delegate, Alexey D. Krutikov, likewise stressed that "the future will judge" the conference and its recommendations; but added it was already safe to say that by strengthening the collaboration of the United Nations the food parley "has brought nearer the victorious termination of the war."

Krutikov, who delivered his speech in rapid Russian, was warmly applauded at the end and again during the translation of his words into English by an interpreter.

Chairman Anders Fjelstad of the Norwegian delegation expressed the enthusiasm of many delegates toward the work of the conference by declaring that "from Hot Springs is pouring forth an inexhaustible fountain of confidence and benefit to all men."

Conference Chairman Marvin Jones, who opened the final session in the Homestead Hotel by rapping his gavel for a moment of silent meditation and prayer, closed it with a speech confidently pointing to a future economy of abundance through which "we shall make all men strong enough to be free."

Depth Bomb From U. S. Plane Sends Nazi U-Boat to Bottom

By the Associated Press

Depth charges from a Navy Catalina patrol plane blew a German submarine in two in the South Atlantic while the U-boat's crew members apparently were sun bathing on the deck, the Navy reported yesterday.

"The submarine was blown out of the water," the Navy said. "The plane's crew reported that as it rose it broke and several objects which looked like long cylindrical tanks floated up among the spouting debris and wreckage. The stern of the submarine then rose vertically out of the water to a height of 8 or 10 feet, bobbed up and down, and then plunged straight down in the rough seas."

Members of the plane crew said they saw three of the submarine's crew swimming about in the debris after their vessel sank. One of the swimmers disappeared, but the other two managed to get aboard life rafts dropped from the plane.

Because of the roughness of the sea, the plane was unable to maintain contact with the left raft, the Navy said, and no report has been received of the landing of any survivors.

The Navy said the U-boat was destroyed "several months ago" after it was sighted by Aviation Machinist's Mate Billie Goodell of Bessemer, Ala., fully surfaced.

A Congress . . . of the People by the People for ?

The news from the battlefronts is good.

At home, it's another story. . . . Congress is fighting a different war. It is turning OPA over to the food profiteers.

Congress is refusing to permit a roll back of prices.

Profiteers have established pill-boxes in the committee rooms of Congress. They are shooting at all price control.

The House Agriculture Committee has successfully fought grade-labeling. The result is you pay top prices for inferior food.

The Senate Small Business Committee is acting for the National Retail Grocers Association in attacking an OPA proposal to publish top prices in chain stores and supermarkets.

The Howard Smith Committee in the House is a sounding board for realtors and landlords who want to kill rent control.

Congress has bowed to the Wall Street-manipulated "farm bloc," but it has refused to help small farmers.

Congress has removed the $25,000 (actually $67,500) ceiling on big salaries, but it has insisted that your wages and ours be frozen.

Congress has sought to undermine the powers of the War Labor Board, established to maintain peaceful labor relations.

Congress has sought to enact vicious, un-American, anti-labor legislation like the Connally, Smith and Hobbs bills.

Congress has sought to help the wealthy evade their proportionate and just share of taxation, and has placed undue tax burdens on the farmers, workers and middle classes.

It is time the plain people who elected Congress insisted that our government should be for the People, not for certain special interests who would exploit the war emergency.

 Prices should be rolled back to May 15th, 1942, the date wages were frozen. * OPA should be strengthened, not destroyed. * The powers of the War Labor Board to adjust all industrial disputes should be restored. * The millions of small farmers should be extended aid needed to increase production of food.

Join us in pressing for this home-front program. Write or wire your Congressman today. Tell him you're keeping score for '44.

275 to Attend Bank Conclave Here Tonight

By S. Oliver Goodman

More than 275 of Washington's financial leaders and their guests will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the Mayflower Hotel to exchange views on wartime banking problems and hear plans for the post-war period.

Principal speaker at the opening session of the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will be Dr. Paul Cadman, nationally known economist, whose subject is "Postwar International Finance Calls for Candor."

Other highlights of tonight's session will be the annual address of President John A. Reilly, introduction of notable guests, appointment of nominating and resolutions committees and selection of delegates by the four local divisions of the American Bankers Association.

Entertainment features for today include a reception, lunch and bridge sponsored by the ladies' committee and a buffet supper at 10 p. m.

A. Scott Offutt, first vice president of the association, will open tomorrow morning's session. Lieut. Col. John Saul, executive vice president of the American Security & Trust Co., on leave, will report for the commercial trade activities committee; Ernest K. Lindley, news commentator and special columnist for The Washington Post, will give a special address on "World Events."

After a recess for lunch, officers of the American Bankers Association will be elected to be followed by election of officers of the District Bankers Association. Committee reports will be presented. The annual family dinner and reception for newly elected officers will be held in the evening starting at 7 o'clock.

New Branch Office Head

The appointment of H. B. Shepherd as district manager of sales of its Washington office to succeed J. B. DeWolf, resigned, was announced yesterday by the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp

Practically all of Mr. Shepherd's business experience has been with J. & L., having started in its Cleveland district sales office in 1929 upon his graduation from Yale University. In March, 1942, he was appointed assistant district sales manager of that office, which position he has held until this time.

Bank Trustees Named

John C. W. Beall, T. Earle Bourne, James A. Donohoe, G. E. Dunkum, jr., Lewis Flemer, John Ford, W. P. C. Hazen, Ernest E. Herrell, Edw. B. Hughes, jr., Francis J. Kane, H. H. McKee, William N. Payne, jr., William F. Simpson, Lambert O. Turner, and William Thomson.

Librarians to Meet

A symposium on wartime problems of Washington financial librarians will be held in New York City at the annual conference of the Special Libraries Association. The three-day meeting will open June 22.

Among those participating in the symposium on June 23 will be the following local Government librarians: Elsie Rackstraw of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Isabella S. Diamond of the Treasury Department, Ruth Fine of the Budget Bureau and Amy D. Early of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, is among the speakers scheduled to address the association.

Greyhond Net Climbs

The Greyhound Corp. yesterday reported net income of $1,941,405 after all charges and Federal taxes for the quarter ended March 31, 1943. This was equivalent to 68 cents a share on the 2,784,353 shares of common stock outstanding and compares with a revised net of 37 cents a share for the first quarter in 1942.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—All deliveries of rye and oats surged forward to new seasonal highs today, rye selling at the best prices in six years, in a broad advance stimulated by a private crop report forecasting considerably reduced acreage for wheat, rye and oats. Trading expanded over the slow pace of the previous sessions this week.

Rye again was the market leader under aggressive commission house buying and covering by previous short sellers. Some liquidation came from Winnipeg and Minneapolis interests, but was surmounted without much difficulty. Wheat was aided by reports of a slight increase in flour business, although most sales were said to be confined to small lots of a routine nature.

At the close wheat was up ⅜ to ¾; July, 1.44⅜@1.44¾; September, 1.43⅜@1.44⅝; corn was unchanged, July, 1.05; oats were ⅛ to ⅜ higher and rye advanced 1⅜ to 1⅝.

Ample Electric Power to Meet War, Civilian Needs Forecast

By the Associated Press

New York, June 4.—Under the drive for more electric power reserves for the war the Nation's generating capacity has been increased 6,500,000 kilowatts since June, 1940, to about 47,500,000 kilowatts since June, 1940, to about 47,500,000 kilowatts and should reach 50 million by the end of this year, W. C. Kellogg, president of the Edison Electric Institute, told members today.

Speaking at the institute's annual meeting, Kellogg said:

"In energy output the total for all agencies contributing to the public supply passed the 200 billion kilowatt-hour mark in the 12 months ended May, 1943, an output more than double that for the boom year, 1929."

In 1942, he said, Federal plants produced about 10 per cent of the total electric energy.

Kellogg said the institute could report "that we have always had ample electricity for both war and civilian demands and expect to maintain this position in the future."

Regarding the industry's full position the institute head commented:

"At the request of the Solid Fuels Administration the electric utilities at considerable expense, enlarged their coal storage capacity so that last fall they carried on hand 110 days supply of coal and came through the winter with a net reserve of 100 days supply, the best showing in this respect of any industry in the country."

As to the future power requirements, Kellogg said:

"Judging by cancellations and reductions in the projected war production program that have been announced and by various other statements of officials of the Government, the end of 1944 should find demand for power for war production decreasing."

W. C. Mullendore, executive vice president of Southern California Edison Co., said the electric railway industry appreciated "the spirit of harmony which is now evidenced in some branches of the Government; we desire to do nothing to disturb that harmony, and we particularly appreciate such generous recognition as has been given to the achievements of the electric utilities in the war program."

H. M. Sawyer, vice president of the American Gas & Electric Corp., urged public utility managements to cooperate with Government and private agencies seeking to help "small business' solve its wartime problems.

Carriers' Net Increases 25% During April

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission reported yesterday that the Nation's 136 class 1 railroads had net operating income of $127,059,362 for April, an increase of 25.1 per cent over the same month last year.

Total operating revenues for April were $748,797,981, including $570,135,788 of freight revenue and $127,915,116 of passenger revenue. Freight revenue was up 21.8 per cent over a year ago and passenger revenue increased 93.5 per cent.

During the first four months of this year, the railroads had net operating income of 468,119,128, an increase of 44.8 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago.

Six Months to Erect $25,000,000 Plant

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 3 (AP).—A production speed record, six months to build a 25 million dollar plant here and deliver the first carload of its product, airplane supercharger fans, was claimed today by the General Electric Co.

The fans are the heart of the supercharger, the device which enables American planes to fly in all altitudes including above 40,000 feet. They suck in such a huge volume of the rarified air of the upper altitudes that it compresses to the weight of sea level air to keep the engine running.

The Fort Wayne plant was financed by the Defense Plant Corp. It produces more of these supercharger impeller fans than any other plant in the country and is the only one making them under full line production methods.

Fairchild Net Gains

Fairchild Aviation Corporation, reported net earnings for the first quarter as $298,092, equal to 88 cents a share, compared to $219,858, or 65 cents a share in 1942.

Motor Shares Lead Modest Stock Rally

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Strength of motors and a modest comeback in the recently stumbling rails and steels gave today's stock market a selectively higher appearance although many leaders elsewhere failed to make progress.

Bidding was attributed partly to the belief the coal labor controversy might be settled soon. Issues with a peace flavor again were the most popular. Farm implements were given a late lift as a Senate committee restored agricultural funds which had been cut by the House. Questions regarding forthcoming corporate taxes and the next big Allied offensive served to restrain some customers.

Turnover Declines

The Associated Press 60-stock average managed to emerge with a net advance of .1 of a point to 52.1. Of 901 issued traded, 435 were up, 237 down and 229 unchanged. Dealings, slow most of the time, picked up in rallying periods. Transfers totalled 1,178,560 shares compared with 1,310,490 Wednesday.

Stocks at peaks for 1943 or longer including General Motors, Chrysler, Yellow Truck, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Deere, American Telephone, American Can, South Porto Rico Sugar, American Distilling, Morris & Essex and International Railways of Central America common and preferred. The last-named were propped by reported plans for bond refunding. Talk of Delaware & Lackawana paying leasing fees in bonds aided Morris & Essex.

In front were Union Pacific, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Southern Pacific, Texas Co., Cuban-American Sugar, U. S. Rubber, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, International Harvester and Oliver Farm.

Embargo Hits Pepsi-Cola

Pepsi-Cola lost a point in the wake of the Mexican embargo on sugar and sugar products exports. The company recently established a syrup manufacturing plant in that country. Cuban and Porto Rican sugars were bolstered by the embargo announcement.

Bonds improved in spots. At Chicago wheat was up ⅜ to ¾ of a cent a bushel and hogs advanced 5 cents. Cotton was unchanged to off 5 cents a bale.

Stored Liquor Seen Ample for 3 to 4 Years

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3—Allied Liquor Industries, Inc., today announced that a study of liquor supplies throughout the country disclosed normal stocks now aging in bonded warehouses were adequate to last three to four years on a rationad basis.

The concern, a trade organization representing both distillers and consumer outlets, said consumers would have available in the next 12 months about 130 million gallons of distilled spirits, plus inventories of wholesalers, retailers and taverns estimated in excess of 25 million gallons and hoarded stocks placed at 10 million gallons.

This total of more than 165 million gallons available was contrasted with actual consumption of 157 million gallons in 1941 and 145 million gallons in 1940. Only 1942 sales of about 190 million gallons exceeded the amount available this year and some of that total was still on hand in hoarded supplies, the association said.

The trade organization said the liquor industry expected the resumption of distilled spirits would be allowed by the Government as soon as Federal officials felt sufficient alcohol had been stored for war needs. Distillers probably will increase shipments to distributors above the current levels of 75 per cent of 1942 sales when distilling is resumed, the organization said.

Court Disapproves Rail Reorganization

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—A plan of reorganization of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Co. under Section 77 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act was disapproved today by Judge Michael L. Igoe.

The court announced it would, on motion of interested parties, order the plan referred back to the Interstate Commerce Commission for reconsideration.

Judge Igoe's 61-page ruling said disapproval centered on two phases of the plan, a financing proposal and the effective date of reorganization.

Wood Furniture Trade Converted 30% to War Work

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 3 (AP). After near record output of civilian goods in 1942, the Nation's wood furniture industry is now converted approximately 30 per cent to war work, an industry economist estimated today in a survey report.

The survey, made by Frank E. Seidman, president of an accounting firm which indexes the industry, disclosed that last year 13 per cent of furniture manufacturing capacity was channeled either to production of war materials or furniture for war agencies.

Civilian furniture turned out in 1942 amounted to 630 million dollars or within 4 per cent of a 660 million dollar record in 1941, Seidman stated. He said that in addition to civilian goods last year, the industry produced 60 million dollars of war implements, plus 40 million dollars of furniture for war-related purposes.

Nats Lose to Tigers, 8-2, Fall Game Behind

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

If you don't think America is the land of opportunity, you have never heard of Dick Wakefield who swings a bat and plays left field for the Detroit Tigers. He parlayed a physical resemblance to Ted Williams and some hitting ability in his own right into a nice $51,000 chunk.

POVICH

Only lately have we caught up with the full story of Wakefield. Leo McDonnell, here with the Detroit Times in the Tigers' entourage, has given us a fill-in. It's a pretty amazing story of how a boy who had never swung a bat in organized baseball could collect $51,000 in advance on the promise that he would hit big league pitching.

To begin with, young Wakefield was a child of happy circumstance in his baseball ambitions. He was slugging out home runs for the University of Michigan and drawing press notices at a time when Ted Williams of the Red Sox was clouting American League pitching for what was to be a .406 average. That was in 1941.

Williams was the talk of all baseball. How that big, tall, loose kid could hit. The Red Sox, the lucky stiffs, had picked up the most natural hitter to break into the majors in years. There were no die-hards in Williams' case. Everybody admitted the fellow was simply a great hitter. A guy like him would bring a quarter of a million dollars on the open market.

And then, suddenly, folks began to hear about a kid named Dick Wakefield up at the University of Michigan. He, too, was left-handed. Like Williams, he was tall. At 6 feet 5, he was even taller. And he had power. Big league scouts began to look him over. By Jove, the kid looked like Williams, not only the way he swung a bat, but in his facial features.

The bidding was merry. Nine major league teams sent their scouts to look Wakefield over. The Cleveland club checked in with a $30,000 offer if he would sign. Clark Griffith invited Wakefield to try out with the Nats when they were in Detroit, and the next day he telegraphed Wakefield an offer of a $40,000 bonus. But the Detroit Tigers hadn't been heard from yet.

The Tigers were simply waiting to top the highest offer for Wakefield. Finally rich Walter O. Briggs, sr., quietly submitted his bid. It was $51,000. The odd thousand was tossed in, says McDonnell, in case any other club was crazy enough to bid $50,000 for a boy who had never played better than college ball.

"Along with his check for $51,000, Mr. Briggs sent Wakefield's mother a brand-new, de luxe Packard," relates McDonald. "That didn't hurt his offer any, either."

Actually, young Wakefield hasn't seen a dime of that $51,000. His widowed mother took charge of it all, put it in trust for him, after deducting a $22,000 chunk he owed the Government in income taxes on the deal.

Wakefield's dad was a ball player. He was Howard Wakefield, who used to catch for Washington and Cleveland. As in the case of Bob Feller, whose dad taught him the rudiments of baseball, Wakefield's early baseball education was gleaned from his father. Papa Wakefield sent the boy to the University of Michigan, not because of any great understanding of Michigan's academic rating, but because he knew the school had a good baseball coach, Ray Fischer, the old Yankee pitcher.

"When Mr. Wakefield thought Dick was ready to play pro ball, he wrote letters every big league club saying he had a fine ball player for them and was ready to entertain bids," relates McDonnell. "However, before the spring of 1941 when Dick came out of Michigan, his dad died. One of his last requests was that Dick would follow the dictates of his mother on his baseball career.

"Mrs. Wakefield conducted all negotiations for her son. She was baseball-minded and bargained shrewdly. She didn't accept the Tigers' $51,000 until all offers were in."

At last reports, Wakefield was batting a nice, very nice, .309, and beginning to justify his manager, Steve O'Neill. He was with O'Neill at Beaumont last year and led the league in total bases. Before the 1943 season started, O'Neil went far out on a limb for Wakefield with the prediction that "he can't miss it. I'll bet he'll be one of the five leading hitters in the American League."

As yet, Wakefield hasn't developed Williams' power. He's getting his hits, but he isn't pulling the ball. Nobody is disturbed, however, O'Neill thinks he is smart enough to start pulling the ball to right field as soon as he gets squared away against big league pitching. He's not fidgety up at the plate like Williams, but that doesn't perturb the Tigers' manager either. "There are only seven other clubs in the league who would like to have Wakefield, because there are only seven other clubs in the league," says O'Neill.

7-Run Inning Locks Game For Bengals

Sullivan's Error Of Judgment Costs Game for Mertz; York Hits Homer

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

A bush-league play by Nats' shortstop Johnny Sullivan, who violated one of baseballs' Page 1 axioms by making a futile attempt to cut off the tying run at the plate instead of gonig for a sure double-play, helped the Detroit Tigers to an 8-2 triumph last night before 14,000 unappreciative Griffith Stadium customers.

Sullivan's lapse was the difference between what would have been one-run inning for the Tigers in the seventh and what developed into a seven-run inning which found Jim Mertz and Alex Carrasquel knocked from the box in that order and Rae Scarborough added a pair of wild pitches for good measure.

That breath of air stirring last night wasn't a breeze. That was the Tigers puffing on the neck of the Nats in the slightly dizzy pennant race which finds the Nats a full game back of the leading Yankees in second place and only half game ahead of the charging Tigers, the hottest thing in the league outside of the weather.

Mertz Lost Fourth Game

Rookie Mertz, making his third start of the season and eventually losing his folurth game, retired the first 14 batters, gave up a tremendous home run to Rudy York in the fifth and a harmless single in the sixth before running into Sullivan and trouble in the seventh.

Rookie Dick Wakefield led off the seventh with a poke into dead center field which hit the 408-foot sign on the first bounce for a triple. Pinkie Higgins drew a walk and Don Ross hit a sharp grounder to Sullivan who had a double play locked up. Instead of throwing the ball to the pleading Priddy standing on second, Sullivan wound up and pegged to Catcher Jake Early, but Wakefield beat the throw by an estimated 9 miles.

Wakefield's run tied the score at 2-2 but not for long. Mertz walked York and Bloodworth flied to right, which should have been the third out but was only the first, Higgins scoring. When Mertz walked Pinch-hitter Rip Radcliff, that was enough for him and Carrasquel took over.

The Venezuelan was not recognizable as the league leading pitcher. A second pinch hitter, Ned Harris, banged a single to center scoring two runs and after Hoover popped up, Cramer singled scoring a run and Wakefield got his second hit of the inning, a line hit to right field which scored another. Scarborough came in and wild-pitched Wakefield to second and then to third before fanning Higgins, the tenth batter of the inning.

Two Runs Looked Big

The first 14 Tigers to face Mertz didn't get the ball out of the infield, four of them fanning, and in the meantime the Nats had come up with two runs in the fourth, which looked as big as 20 the way Mertz was fogging the ball past the baffled Detroiters.

George Case opened the Nats' fourth with a scratch hit off Higgins' glove, the first Washington hit and while Virgil Trucks was walking Spence, Case went to third on two passed balls. Mickey Vernon scored Case with a long fly and Bob Johnson rifled a single to left scoring Spence. Priddy hit into his second double play to end the inning. That was all the scoring for the Nats, who made only seven hits off Trucks and Dizzy Trout, the former's successor in the seventh. Trucks was the winning pitcher for the fifth time this season.

Rudy York, whose hitting was so pitiful he was removed for a pinch hitter last week, the first time of his career, blasted Mertz out of his no-hit dreams in the fifth inning with two men out. York looked at two balls an da strike and then tagged a fast ball seven rows into

At first glance you would think mayhem was about to be committed, but it is all very harmless, just a ball player trying to get along. It all happened when Don Kolloway, Chisox infielder, decided to steal home in the ninth inning against the Red Sox yesterday. Chisox Bunch Hits to Beat Bosox, 6 to 4

By International News Service

Boston, June 3.—The Chicago White Sox bunched six hits for five runs off Heber Dick Newsom in the third inning today and went on to beat the Red Sox, 6 to 4, in the opener of a five-game series.

Joe Haynes, making his season's bow as a starting pitcher for the pale hose, was credited with the win through he had to be relieved by Orvil Grove in the sixth. The relief pitcher hurled hitless ball.

Only two of the Boston runs were earned, the Chisox committing four errors.

Mahnken has been coach of Princeton's 150-pound grid teams since 1937 and during these six seasons his teams have won five Eastern Intercollegiate League championships.

Mahnken came to Princeton from Columbia High School, South Orange, where he coached football, basketball and track for eight years.

Browns' Muncrief Issues Pass With Bases Full to Give Run With Two Out

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Manager Joe McCarthy shook up the batting order of his New York Yankees today and though the changes scarcely could be said to have put the bomb back in the Bombers, they did win.

The margin of their 2-to-1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns, however, was a gift run in the ninth inning after two were out.

Charley Keller received credit for a double when Right Fielder Mike Chartak misjudged his fly and he moved to third on an infield out. This caused Bob Muncrief, the Browns' pitcher, to load the bases with two intentional walks and gave him a bad habit. For, after fanning Nick Etten for the second out, he lost control entirely and served four consecutive wide pitches to Bill Johnson to walk in the winning run.

New York's other tally came in the second on a pair of singles by Bill Dickey and Etten and altogether the Yanks made only six safeties off Muncrief. John Lindell was moved into the clean-up spot and Joe Gordon dropped to sixth, but both went hitless.

The Browns were held to four blows by big Ernie Bonham, but one of these was a home run by George McQuinn in the fifth to tie the score.

The victory, Bonham's fifth against two defeats, protected the Yankees' slender American League lead against the Washington Nationals, who were scheduled for a night game with the third-place Detroit Tigers.

Tom Bridges, Leonard to Hurl Tonight

Veteran right-handers Tommy Bridges, for the Tigers, and Dutch Leonard, for the Nats, are the pitching choices for the second game of the five-game series with the Tigers tonight. The night game will be the fourth in a row for the Nats and any kind of a crowd will help them set a new attendance mark for a seven-game stretch in Griffith Stadium . . . Leonard took one of the worst poundings of his career the last time out when the Indians battered the knuckle ball artist for 12 hits in 5 innings in a game the Nats eventually won. Bridges has been pitching with success in the early innings but has a habit of tiring in the stretch. He is still one of the Tigers' aces, however. Jim Mertz fanned four in a row last night in the second and third innings, York, Bloodworth, and Parsons on vicious swings and Trucks on a called strike . . . When Mertz had no-hit ideas as late as the fifth inning, the man who had saved him to that point was Gerry Priddy, who raced behind second to make a sensational stop and throw of Hoover's grounder in the first inning . . . Alex Kampouris was on the verge of giving Umpire Charley Berry a shove when he was called out at third in the fifth inning on a bullet throw from Doc Cremer . . . Mickey Vernon remained in the throes of the worst slump of his career, striking out twice during a hitless evening . . . Tomorrow will be ladies' day with the Tigers, Sunday a double-header.

Flock's Lead Cut to Half Game; Nicholson Homers; Warneke Wins First

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, all puffed up about winning the final game of their St. Louis series, bustled into the Windy City today and promptly had the wind taken out of them by the last-place Chicago Cubs.

The Bruins bagged an easy 8-to-1 victory, which, coupled with the Cardinals' 8-to-2 conquest of the Phillies, reduced the Dodgers' lead to a half game.

Old Lon Warneke, beaten three times this spring without a single victory, smothered Brooklyn's Superbas on six hits and had them shutout till the eight

His teammates, making a total of 13 hits, gave him 2 runs in the first inning when Ed Head walked the first two batters and both scored as Phil Cavarretta singled and Bill Nicholson hit a long fly.

In the third Eddie Stanky walked and Nicholson hit his fifth home-run in six games. Head then gave way to Les Webber, who was tapped for two more runs in the sixth when Lou Novikoff singled with the bases loaded.

McAfee to Report At Michigan U.; May Play Again

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 3.—George McAfee, former Duke University and Chicago Bears halfback, will arrive next Wednesday on the University of Michigan campus, it was announced today, but whether he will play for the Wolverines next fall is as yet undetermined.

McAfee is being transferred here from the Jacksonville (Fla.) Naval Air Base as a physical instructor for 1300 Navy trainees expected to arrive on the Michigan campus July 1.

There is no assurance McAfee will play varsity football. According to Western Conference rules he must take academic courses from university faculty men in order to be eligible. McAfee primarily will be an instructor himself, but whether he desires to go to school at the same time is something for him to decide.

Dickson Holds Phils As Cardinals Win, 8-2

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 3.—Murray Dickson came out of the bullpen today to pitch his first complete victory of the season for the Cardinals with 8-to-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The little right-hander, who already had two victories in relief roles, was aided by 12 solid blows off the Cards' bats, including a single by Stan Musial which stretched his hitting streak to 20 consecutive games.

The Phils counted twice in the fourth on Ronnie Northey's home run, an error and singles by Jimmy Wasdell and Babe Dahlgren.

Favorite Olympian Runs 4th

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—The favorite players took a bath, as they say on the backstretch, in today's featured Standard Purse. They piled in the money on Joe Bruno's Olympian but the odds-on favorite failed to get up a gallop and Mrs. J. H. Elliott's Pittsburgh proved an easy winner in the test of about 7 furlongs. The 5-year-old, winner of eight races last year, came to the finish line five lengths in front of a photo for second position in which Dr. J. Fred Adams' Wesley A took the nod over Mrs. Anna M. Brockman's Cureagal. Olympian was fourth and Glorene was last.

With Olympian out of the money, Pittsburgh paid $8.60 and was clocked in 1:26.6 while under the handling of Apprentice Jockey R. Fitzgerald. The crowd was small but betting was brisk.

Glorene, the light weight of the party, set the early pace. Pittsburgh overtook the Heloria Stable filly on the backstretch and drew out. The crowd waited in vain for Olympian to move but the 4-year-old just wouldn't respond to Jockey Charlie Quattlebaum's urging. Wesley A lacking speed today, closed full of run along with Cureagal.

The daily double brought a payoff of $108.20. Jockey Carson Kirk, who specializes in winning first races, took the opener aboard John E. Hughes' Patland, a $16.60 shot. The second event went to P. Bertini's recently-acquired Strana which paid an individual mutuel of $15.40.

Apprentice Jockey A. Kirkland was suspended for three days by order of the stewards for interfering with Olympian in the feature race. Kirkland rode Glorene.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATLAND, $16.60, $8.00, $5.00; INDIGNATION, $8.00, $6.60; NEON LIGHT, $6.00.

PATLAND went to front at once, drew out but had to be put to pressure through stretch to stave off INDIGNATION. The latter was in first flight from start, responded when shaken up and was wearing down winner at end. NEON LIGHT moved to contention boldly, was taken up and sent to inside and closed with bold rush. REVELRY had keen early speed on inside and weakened.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:51. Off at 1:52. Winner, P. Bertini's b. f. Field of 47 in Schoolboy Golf Qualifying Rounds Today

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 3.—Dismal mediocrity will be rewarded to the tune of $8500 at Belmont Saturday when several horses named Joe—or whatever the equine equivalent of a nonentity is—rassle for second, third and fourth money in the seventy-fifth running of the Belmont Stakes.

CONSIDINE

There is, of course, no thought of their taking first money, which is about $30,000. Nor is there any high-falutin' talk of running those goats "just to see my colors carried." The owners are out for the tidy sums that can be made no matter how far their horses finish behind Count Fleet, who could win this one running sideways. If the wonder horse wins the Belmont by 50 lengths the second horse's owner still will get $5000, third place will be worth $2500 and fourth place $1000. The Count has created a strange little black market, in which colts who never could win a $5000 race can pick up that much by abysmally losing a multithousand dollar race to The Count.

He is so appallingly better than his 3-year-old "rivals" that each race he runs now becomes—in effect—a walkover. But he'll probably never have the honor of starring in a real walkover, in which no other horse even puts in an appearance. That happened to Exterminator in one of the Saratoga Cups the Kilmer gelding won, and it happened to Whirlaway in the $10,000 (winner take all) Pimlico Special last fall.

The Fleet had a little workout the other day at Belmont. He went playfully through a mile and a quarter in 2:04, doing the mile in 1:35 3-5. Though he had to go around two bends he was only a fraction of a second behind the time in which the mile, of the mile and a quarter Suburban, was run last Monday, the Suburban stars had to negotiate only one bend. Count was simply "jogging," the clockers said, through the last portion of the mile and a quarter workout.

Workouts such as this one, and the light-hearted manner in which he runs away from other 3-year-olds, lend weight to John Hertz's solemnly given opinion that The Count is the fastest horse ever bred in this country—a statement which perhaps raised the eyebrows of the elderly and generally indignant Sam Riddle, owner of Man O' War; Lieut. Col. C. V. Whitney, who owned Equipoise, and the Wrights, who own Whirlaway. Maybe it upset Albert Sabath, too, but none of these gentlemen would be inclined to say that Herts overstated.

The turtles who'll waddle after The Count Saturday—when he joins that slim pack of thoroughbreds who have won the triple crown And Don Cameron, who trains The Count, isn't record-minded. He won't be able to press him enough to make him go into high gear, just wants to keep winning, and the margin doesn't matter. The Count, as we have remarked before, won't have a chance to bear out his owner's high praise until he's tossed in there against the Alsabs and the Whirlys.

Lieut. Col. Egbert White, of the North African "Stars and Stripes," sends us his issue of last January 27, in which we had a small piece picking two all-service ball clubs "either one of which could win the National or American League pennant by 20 games."

There were some good ballplayers on those teams, but, since the time that list was made Uncle Sam had gained still another great ball club, certainly fit enough to win a pennant in these times. A couple of the boys are still in the bullpen, so far as Selective Service is concerned, but they'll soon be in:

Vern Stephens (Browns), Johnny Mize (Giants), Joe DiMaggio (Yanks), Dick Wakefield (Tigers), Enos Slaughter (Cards), Peewee Reese (Dodgers), Charlie Gehringer (Tigers), Babe Dahlgren (Phils), Harry Danning (Giants) and Johnny Beazley (Cards).

There are about 16 big league owners who would swap their entire war-time rosters for the above bevy

Lou O'Neill, the horse handicapper, was listening to the war-bond auction at Belmont on Suburban day, and when the haranguer bawled, "Who'll make it five thousand dollars?" Lou stuffed a handkerchief in his own mouth.

Later he explained, "My wife was listening to one of those fellows recently and just when he said 'Who'll make it five thousand?' danged if she didn't sneeze, and the guy said, 'The little lady over there said five thousand, now who'll make it six.'"

14 Schools Represented; Play at Noon

A field of 47 schoolboy golfers from 14 schools, including two former champions, were paired last night in the tenth annual Metropolitan scholastic championship for The Washington Post trophy.

The field was only eight entries short of last year's total and at least eight of the young golfers stand good chances of winning the tournament. The entry list includes all the outstanding schoolboy linksmen of the vicinity.

The 18-hole qualifying round will get under way today at noon with Thomas Tulenko, who must play early in order to get to Wilson High by 4 p. m. for the baseball playoffs, first off the tee.

Match Play Tomorrow

The 16 low scorers will swing into match-play rounds tomorrow at Woodmont with the first round at 8 o'clock and the second at 11:45. The semifinals and finals will be played Sunday.

Art Myers, defending champion from Devitt, and Alton Willett, the 1941 titlist, from Bethesda, are the cofavored players, but they must look for stiff opposition from Ray Burgdorf, Bill McDaniel, Buddy Brylawski, Logan Manders, George Black and Charles Price. Price yesterday won the Georgetown Prep School championship by defeating James Crowley, 1 up.

Seven Schools Entered

Seven schools entered four-man teams, Wilson, Western, Coolidge, Blair, Bethesda, St. John's and Roosevelt, with Bethesda the logical favorite.

Frank Emmet, who originated the event a decade ago, made the pairings last night and will be in charge of today's qualifying rounds.

Conzelman Quits Grid To Publicize Browns

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Don Barnes (left) president of the St. Louis Browns, and Jimmy Conzelman, who resigned as coach of the Chicago football Cardinals to join the Browns as Barnes' assistant.

Cardinal Football Mentor Named Aide to Barnes, Publicity Director

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 3.—The last-place Browns got some help today—in the front office—with the signing of affable Jimmy Conzelman as assistant to President Donlad L. Barnes and public relations director of the American League Club.

In making his venture into baseball, Conzelman resigned as vice president and coach of the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional Football League. He will take up his functions here June 10.

Barnes said he and Vice President William O. DeWitt believed that "Conzelman's background in athletics and business and his national reputation in the field of public relations would make an excellent addition to the Browns' organization."

Was a Bit Vague

Conzelman, at a press conference, was a bit vague about his duties, but suggested his sports contacts would prove valuable in helping the Browns line up young players. Barnes interjected that Jimmy would be responsible for all the normal activities of a baseball press agent.

There was only passing mention of the fact that Conzelman also would be assistant to the president and public relations director of Barnes' American Investment Co. of Illinois, which operates several small loan agencies.

He will have his office with the investment company, rather than at Sportsman's Park, home of the Browns. Presumably, his principal work will be in public relations for the holding company, which has been involved in legislative investigations of the small-loan business in Missouri and Illinois.

Conzelman is one of the most versatile personalities in the field of sports. In addition to playing and coaching both college and pro football, he has been a boxer, writer, newspaper publisher, salesman, painter of pictures, composer, actor and radio commentator. He is an accomplished orator, after-dinner speaker, raconeur and barbershop-quartet baritone.

Cut Short by War

His schooling at Washington University (St. Louis), where he later coached, was cut short by the first World War which found him in a Navy uniform at Great Lakes. He never got his degree but last April he was made an honorary master of science and physical education by Dayton University.

It was there in the spring of 1942 that he delivered a since-famous address to the graduating class on "A Young Man's Physical and Mental Approach to War." The speech has been made compulsory reading at West Point.

Bucs Outslug Giants to Win By 9-6 Count

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 3.—The Pittsburgh Pirates made better use of their hits today in a slugging session with the New York Giants and walked off with a 9-to-6 victory, although the Giants had an 11-to-10 edge at bat.

The Buccaneers went to the front in the first inning with a run on one single and two errors, scored four more in the third, three of them on Johnny Barrett's triple with the bases loaded, and continued with two in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Behind this barrage Rip Sewall was able to breeze to his sixth victory against one defeat, although Johnny Lanning came to the mound in the ninth to get the final out, fanning Johny Rucker, after a pinch single by Van Mungo had counted New York's last two runs.

Wilson, Tech Meet Today In Play-Off

Jack Ogle of Wilson High, outstanding hurler of the interhigh baseball series, and Milo Quail, Tech's most dependable moundsman, will return to the hill today after both pitched Tuesday, as opponents in the playoff to decide the runner-up team and Eastern's opponent in the championship series.

Today's winner will meet Eastern, Monday, in the first game of a best two out of three series, with the second game Wednesday and the third and final, if necessary, next Friday. Wilson is host today at 4 p. m.

Wilson and Tech tied for the runner-up spot with five victories and two defeats each, one of Tech's defeats being a 3-2 loss at Wilson's hands.

Ogle has won five straight in the series since recovering from an appendectomy. He is slated for a tryout with the Nats due to his brilliant hurling in the series. Quail started for Tech Tuesday against Eastern and was knocked out in the fifth inning in his first bad game of the year.

Griffith and Altrock To Address Grid Group

Clark C. Griffith, Washington Baseball Club president, and Nick Altrock, popular comedian-coach, will jointly address the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club of Washington next Tuesday.

'Bitsy' Grant Finding Time For His Tennis

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., June 3.—The mighty atom of tennis is getting in plenty of time at his favorite sport but it's all in preparation against the Axis.

GRANT

Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, two times national clay courts champion and winner of many other top tournaments, is a Private First Class at Kelly Field, headquarters of the San Antonio Air Depot Control Command and San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center.

He's a busy boy as he trains for overseas duty but he sets aside each Sunday to keep tuned up on his tennis. It's in line with his duties as mail orderly and physical instructor for the Fiftieth Air Depot Group.

The Atlanta mite joined the Air Corps April 6, 1942, and was stationed at Tanforan, Calif., where he played his last tournament tennis before the Texas Open, appearing with Bruce Barnes in February of this year.

He came to Kelly Field February 19.

Black Holds Tribe, A's Score, 10-4

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 3.—Ripping into Joe Heving and their former teammate, Chubby Dean, for 18 hits, the Philadelphia Athletics skidded the Cleveland Indians into sixth place today by taking a 10-to-4 victory.

Don Black, who had been given a local anaesthetic before the game to overcome the pain of a sore back, held the visitors to one run until the ninth inning, when an abortive rally produced three runs.

Bobby Estalella, Athletics' left fielder, was hit on the head by a pitched ball in the eighth but remained in the game. Earlier, Outfielder Henry Edwards was bruised when he collided with Jeff Heath.

Dove Pie to Miss Belmont Stakes

New York, June 3 (AP).—One of the few 3-year-olds that had been regarded as a likely starter against Count Fleet in Saturday's Belmont Stakes, was removed from the picture today when Trainer D. R. McDaniel sent word that J. W. Rodgers' Dove Pie would not be shipped from Detroit because of transportation difficulties.

With Dove Pie, recent stakes winner at Detroit, absent, Count Fleet's opposition for the rich 1½-mile race probably will come from William du Pont, jr.'s Fairy Manhurst, Beverley Bogart's Deseronto and either Famous Victory or Four Freedoms from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable.

Big Carp Landed

Hagerstown, Md., June 3.—One hour was required by John and Henry Cosgrove, brothers, and Donald Shubert, fishing from a boat, to land a 27¼-pound carp they hooked in the Potomac River. John Cosgrove hooked the fish which measured 39 inches.

Villar, Wilson in Workouts At Turner's Arena Today

Outstanding boxers who will throw leather on Promoter Joe Turner's promising outdoor card at Griffith Stadium Monday night today will crowd Turner's Arena in public workouts for the edification of the curious and doubting Toms, starting at 2 p. m.

Claudio Villar, handsome Spaniard who has taken out his first United States citizenship papers and who plans to make Washington his home, will transfer his base of operations from Apollo gym to Turner's as he takes the next to last hard drill in preparation for his 10-round feature event with big Al Hart, 235-pound Army War College Negro warrior, winner of 19 of his past 21 bouts.

Hart, who has compiled four victories and a draw with Larry Lane in his five fights here, may be coaxed into transferring his activities from the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. to Turner's along with the rest of the boys.

Jackie Wilson Due Today

Jackie Wilson, former featherweight champion, who gave Danny Petro a terrific whipping in inflicting a 10-round t. k. o. defeat on the local boy, is due to arrive here this morning and definitely workout. Wilson's representative, Jack Laken, arrived yesterday.

Jimmy (The Spoiler) Phillips, who will meet "Jumpin' Jackie" in a 10-rounder supplementing the Hart-Villar affair and who holds four decisions over D. C. warriors, Bernie Cady, Oscar Wright, Roy Lewis and a split in two scraps with Lew Hanbury, also is being requisitioned by Turner to come over from Baltimore for public workouts, but it is not definite he will appear.

A Big-Time Bout Looms

Laken, incidentally, said he was receptive to a bout with Lew Hanbury, the local lad who gave Jackie Callura a fine going over at Uline Arena several weeks ago, or with Willie Pep or even Callura in an outdoor shot here this summer under the Joe Turner banner, provided terms are right. Turner, it was announced yesterday, offered Hanbury $2000 to meet Wilson but Al (Weskit) Weill, who recently bought Hanbury's contract for $3500, hasn't answered as of last night. Weill, however, is expected to arrive here within the next couple of days.

Mutual Network . . To Broadcast '43 All-Star Contest

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis announced today the radio rights to the 1943 all-star game had been sold to the Gillette Safety Razor Co. for $25,000.

The description will be aired exclusively by Mutual over a network of 200 stations in the United States and Canada. Short wave broadcasts will reach American Armed Forces all over the world.

Landis, after agreeing on a contract with J. P. Spang, jr., Gillette's president, said the $25,000 would be deposited to the credit of the major league baseball equipment fund, which is used to buy baseball equipment for the armed forces. All other receipts from the game also will go into this fund.

Picked teams from the National and American Leagues will play the all-star game in Shibe Park, Philadelphia, Tuesday night, July 13.

Navy Takes Over Tanforan Track

San Francisco, Calif., June 3 (AP).—The former Tanforan race track, first an assembly center for Japanese being relocated and later an Army center specializing in commando training, is now in the Navy's hands. Beginning Friday, it will be used for training personnel destined for advanced bases, Twelfth Naval District Headquarters said.

Wright Fight May Clarify Feather Muddle

Will Meet Terranova In Garden Tonight For Shot at a Title

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 3.—Chalky Wright and Phil Terranova tangle in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for a chance to get a crack at the world featherweight championship—and now the professor will please explain, "what featherweight championship?"

For the 126-pound title set-up, as it is put together at this moment, represents a combination of "button, button, who's got the button" and the old Army game of trying to pick the pea from under the right walnut shell.

As a matter of fact, the agreement for tomorrow's 15-round ruckus calls for the winner to get a shot at Wee Willie Pep's world championship (as recognized in New York). The only thing wrong with that picture is that Wee Willie meets Sal Bartolo in Boston for the crown next Tuesday night—and just suppose Sal takes it away from him?

Well, that's not going to make much difference to the New York State Athletic Commission. The Empire State's sage swat solons, who crowned the package of Pep originally, apparently feel they can uncrown him, too. So, they've said they wouldn't recognize Tuesday's tussle as a title affair—although Sal and Willie are meeting at the weight and over the derby route.

This line of reasoning naturally, won't confuse the customers much. Isn't Boston 'way up there in New England, they'll figure? That's a long way from New York, as "A" gas coupons go, so perhaps the New York fistic fathers feel that this is the exception to the old rule that "distance lends enchantment." Or, as the National Boxing Association asked on hearing of the New York Commission action, "Isn't Boston in America?" Of course, at that point the N. B. A. didn't explain that it recognises Jumping Jackie Callura, the Canadian, as champion.

Present Situation A Bit Confusing To All Concerned

So, the ageless Chalky, who insists he's not old enough to remember the Battle of San Juan Hill, and young Phil, a long-armed local zoot-suiter who's had just 29 pro starts, are going to fight in some kind of a featherweight elimination. Maybe it's to eliminate the elimination. Anyway, they'll cut up most of the $30,000 gate to which Promoter Mike Jacobs figures some 10,000 customers will "kick in."

Chalky, who once held the crown until Wee Willie won it running away last December, is a 2-to-5 favorite. The Chalk is noted for carrying a firecracker in each fist. So if "Phearless Phil" gets too close, the Los Angeles veteran may show him there's no substitute for a good right hand wallop. This corner thinks he will.

Great Lakes Nine Wins 11th Straight

Great Lakes, Ill., June 3 (AP).—The undefeated Great Lakes Bluejackets won their eleventh straight baseball victory today, defeating the Glenview, Ill., Naval Air Station, 10 to 1. Henry Perry, formerly of the Dallas Texas League Club, hurled the first five innings for Great Lakes and was credited with the win.

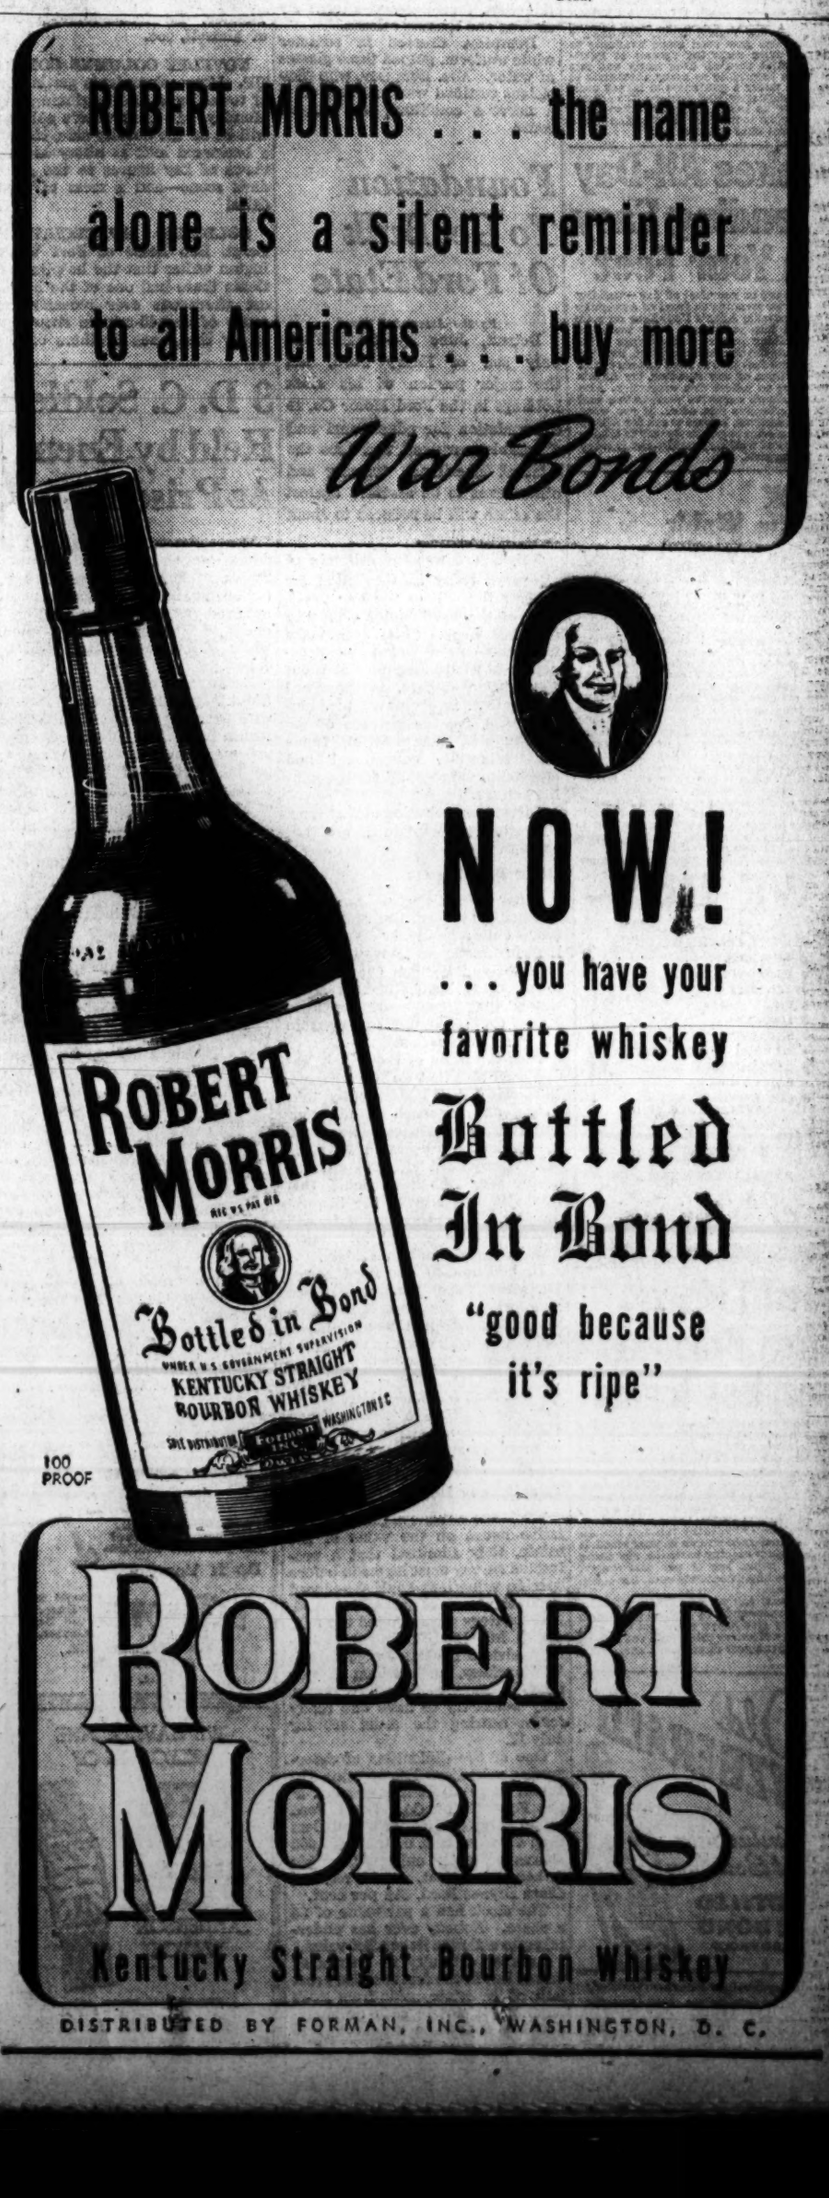
50% Cut Too Much, Says Hollingbery

Pullman, Wash., June 3 (AP).—Orin E. (Babe) Hollingbery, Washington State College football coach for 17 years, says a 50 per cent salary cut decided upon by the College Athletic Council is "out of line," although he does want to remain on the job. "I'm part of the institution," he added.

The cut is from $10,000 to $5000, but the figure might be upped if a conference football schedule—now doubtful—can be played, the council indicated.



Dempsey, Detectives Found Woodall Running From Room

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., June 3.—A private detective testified today that he, Jack Dempsey and two other detectives raided Mrs. Dempsey's Los Angeles apartment and found her in bed and Benny Woodall, named as co-respondent, running from the room.

Ned H. Peterson, Los Angeles detective, told the Supreme Court referee in Dempsey's divorce action against his wife, the former songstress, Hannah Williams, that when first seen by the raiders before midnight last November 22, Woodall was barefoot, had on trousers and an undershirt, and was trying "to put on what looked like a lady's red coat."

The former heavyweight champion has charged his wife with misconduct with former lightweight champion Lew Jenkins, and with Woodall, Jenkins' former trainer. Mrs. Dempsey has filed a countersuit, but her allegations have not been made public. Adultery is the only ground for divorce in New York State.

As the hearing started its fourth day, a deposition from Mrs. Lyda Hallen, manager of a Los Angeles apartment house, was read.

Mrs. Hallen said Mrs. Dempsey, another woman, Woodall and his sister, Mrs. Jackie Griffin, were together and intoxicated in Mrs. Griffin's apartment sometime in November, 1942.

Describing the raid on Mrs. Dempsey's apartment, Peterson said Woodall ran into the living room where Dempsey was, and when he (Peterson) went into the bedroom, Mrs. Dempsey questioned: "What's this all about?"

Peterson said he replied "You'll find out" and then he said he heard Dempsey call "Woodall is on my back."

"Dempsey threw Woodall over his back and onto the couch and Woodall started kicking and throwing his feet and arms around. I pushed Dempsey away and told him not to hit him (Woodall.")

Dempsey, the former world's heavyweight boxing champion and now a lieutenant commander in the Coast Guard, went into the bedroom, with the other detectives, Peterson said, adding that then Woodall asked him, "What's going on—I was sleeping."

Related Peterson:

"Then we came into the bedroom and Benny Woodall sat on the bed and then Mrs. Dempsey said 'Oh my darling Benny, what have they done to you?'"

"What did Mr. Dempsey say," asked Arthur F. Driscoll, Dempsey's attorney.

"He said—and I'm quoting him—'you rat. You've broken up my home once before. I found you together. I'm through. You keep her. You look after her.'"

Peterson testified that Dempsey and the two other detectives watched through open windows into the apartment on the previous night while a party was on.

He said that Mrs. Dempsey and Benny Woodall were in the dinette, that "they were doing a lot of kissing and necking and Woodall was in Mrs. Dempsey's lap part of the time and part of the time on the table."

While Peterson was on the stand, Woodall, a slight, blond man sat in the front row of spectators' seats fidgeting, blushing and alternately smiling and looking solemn.

Dempsey, dressed in summer white uniform, gulped three glasses of water. Mrs. Dempsey, who physicians testified was suffering from a nervous condition, was not in court.

Asthma Mucus Fought Thru Blood

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Meadaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Meadaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Meadaco from your druggist today for only 60c. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.

Makes All-Day Standing Easy On Your Feet

If you are on your feet all day—walking the floor or standing in front of a machine—just sprinkle Allen's Foot-Ease on your feet and into your shoes every morning. This soothing powder really brings quick relief from the discomfort of tired, burning feet. When feet tend to swell and shoes feel pinched from all day standing, try Allen's Foot-Ease to relieve this congestion. Also acts to absorb excessive perspiration and prevent offensive foot odors. If you want real foot comfort, be sure to ask for Allen's Foot-Ease—the easy, simple way to all-day standing and walking comfort. Get it today at all druggists.

If You Get Up Nights You Can't Feel Right

If you have to get up 3 or more times a night your rest is broken and it's no wonder if you feel old and run down before your time. Functional rather than organic or systemic Kidney and Bladder trouble often may be the cause of many pains and symptoms simply because the Kidneys may be tired and not working fast enough in filtering and removing irritating excess acids, poisons and wastes from your blood. So if you get up nights or suffer from burning, scanty or frequent passages, leg pains, backache, or swollen ankles, due to non-organic or non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles, you'll make no mistake in trying the prescription called Cystex. Because it has given such joyous happy relief in so high a percentage of such cases, Cystex is sold under a guarantee of money back on return of empty package unless completely satisfactory to you. Cystex costs only 35c at druggists and the guarantee protects you.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Foundation To Get Bulk Of Ford Etate

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 3.—Edsel Ford, only son of Henry Ford, left the major portion of his stock holdings in the Ford Motor Co. to a foundation for educational and charitable purposes, and thus the total of inheritance, transfer and other taxes to be assessed against the estate will be reduced to about 12 million dollars.

This figure was the estimate of attorneys today as they filed for probate the will of the late president of the Ford Motor Co., who died last week. Chief beneficiary from the estate, which the attorneys said would inventory at about 200 million dollars, is the Ford Foundation, incorporated in January, 1936, for the purpose of receiving and administering funds for "scientific, educational and charitable purpose, all for the public welfare."

Gifts to organization of that type, the attorneys explained, are tax exempt.

Other Beneficiaries

Other beneficiaries are Mrs. Eleanor Clay Ford, the widow, and four children—Henry Ford 2d, Benson Ford, Mrs. Walter Buhl Ford 2d and William Clay Ford—to whom is bequeathed in equal shares that portion of the Ford Motor Co. stock not conveyed to the Ford Foundation.

With the filing of the will it was disclosed also that on November 4, 1935, Edsel Ford had executed four trusts, one for each of the four children, to remain operative until the beneficiary becomes 25 years old. Henry Ford 2d is the only one of the four who has reached that age. He will receive the bequest directly. The other bequests will go into the trusts, with Mrs. Edsel Ford as special administratrix.

In addition to his Ford Motor Co. stock, Edsel Ford also owned a majority of the stock of the Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit. The bank stock as well as the family estate in suburban Grosse Pointe Shores, a mansion at Seal Harbor, Me., the White Hart Inn in New Hampshire, a residence in Florida and several other pieces of property are bequeathed to the widow.

Valuations in Doubt

While the attorneys placed a tentative figure on the value of the estate, they admitted that a protracted survey must be made before specific valuations could be placed upon the various items involved. No inventory accompanied the will, drawn July 15, 1936, but the attorneys advised Probate Judge Joseph V. Trombley, with whom it was filed in nearby Macomb County, they would try to have one ready for a hearing the court set for July 12.

One of the difficulties of determining valuations hinges upon the actual value of a share of stock in the Ford Motor Co. Edsel Ford was understood to own not less than 41½ per cent of the 3,452,000 shares of stock outstanding; his father, 55 per cent, and his mother, Clara Bryant Ford, 3½ per cent.

The stock had a par value of $5 a share. Nobody ever has undertaken to estimate its market value.

Another difficulty in estimating values lies in the fact that the great bulk of the estate, aside from stock holdings, is not in cash or immediately convertible assets but in factories and real estate.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE IS PACKING. After almost a solid year of terrific success at El Patio, Little Jack Little has decided he needs a rest. He'll be leaving on Saturday, June 12. My stars! That's only about a week off. It's almost impossible to exaggerate the importance of Little Jack's contribution to El Patio's prosperity—and to his own, too, for the big little pianist doesn't work for peanuts. He's a perfect illustration of the fact that it pays to fork over top money for top entertainers.

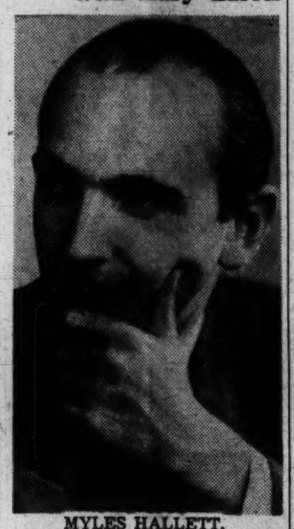
The week's new bands are ineffable. Shep Fields' "new music" at Uline Arena has a scintillance that makes it a musical adventure to listen to him . . . As for Teddy Powell's rhythm, now at the Victory Room, it's always "out of the world."

STAR FACES IN STAR PLACES. Captain Russell Swann, more famed as a magician than a military man, lit singer Gloria Foster's ciggie in the Mayflower Lounge the other eve—and a swoosh of flame shot up almost to the ceiling The captain is still a magico at heart. . . . Jay C. Flippen, the ol' Broadway Cunnel, visits Restaurant "400" almost every evening, sits around and chins with his old pal, Owner Joe Moss. . . . The sweet faced lady who drops into Mayfair often in the afternoons is Mrs. Ann Breckinridge, economist. She's the mother of Dardanelle, Mayfair's girl maestro. . . . Don Benecke, young sailor brother of Tex Beneke, Glenn Miller's former singing saxist, dropped into the Dubonnet Room the other night. Davy Crocker and his bandsmen gave him a great welcome. Don is also a musical ace, 'played with the late Bunny Berigan's band for three years.

Nat Young, brother of Paul Young of Paul Young's, appears in "Dead Men Walk" at the Pix Theater. He gives a smart account of himself, too.

NOVELTY COLUMNS COMING UP. Your columnist is getting out of town for a week beginning next Monday. So next week's columns will be on the novelty side, include a backward look at nitery history, views of key figures in the after-dark scene—and a mess of scandalia!

SOLDIERS' APPRECIATION. Sergt. Bob Berse of Fort Washington writes that the hospital patients there had one of the happiest afternoons ever recently because of the 45-minute show put on by the Jones Brothers of the



MYLES HALLETT, whose breezy dance music matches the breezes on the beauteous Starlight Roof

Brown Derby. Says the sergeant: "The applause was so rousing that there were tears in the Jones Brothers' eyes. I can't tell you how much we appreciated their kindness and showmanship."

CAREER BOY. Julian Altman, violinist with Jack Allyn's dinner music group at Treasure Island, is also first violinist with the National Symphony. In his brief 27 years he has received a musical education entirely through scholarships, graduating from Juilliard, done much radio and dance band work, played with the Brooklyn and Westchester Symphonies, appeared in two motion pictures with stars Melvyn Douglas and Walter Connolly.

Olmsted's famed "Kick in the Pants" cocktail was invented several years ago to add an extra bang to a Shriners' convention. It's something like a sidecar—but better.

SWEET 'N HOT. Mischievous Betsy Jones of Sandy Sandifer's band in the Metronome Room is doing vocal tricks with "Annie's Cousin Fannie"—and we thought "Jivin' Jack" Shaffer of the Casino Royal had a patent on it . . . Georgia and Jerry of the Anchor Room give a haunting glide to "Coming In on a Wing and a Prayer" . . . For notalgia there's nothing like Jack Neal's basso-ing of "Mandalay" in Hi Hat . . . The Heintz Brothers of Restaurant "823" are doing a whole cycle of beautiful Grieg numbers . . . Dick Crook, the "Mr. Two by Two" of the Louisiana, shows every one a wonderful time when he starts to shout "Lily Bell" . . . Sid Willoughby and Durward Bowersox of Burt's Trans-Lux play all the rainy day songs, "Singing in the Rain," "April Showers" and so on, when it's raining outside . . . The Old New Orleans fairly rocks when Les Williams and his band give out on "Are You Ready?" . . . "Let's Get Lost" is streamlined to perfection by Ralph Hawkins and his band at Crossroads . . . The Neptune Room's Frank Victor has a new Latin medley that artfully blends famous Italian and Spanish music.

Leo Reisman will take his orchestra from Del Rio to New York's Waldorf after June 15. Next Del Rio attraction will be a nationally known Latin-American band.

DEXTERITY DEPARTMENT. It was an education in dextreity to watch a young flier on crutches maneuver himself through the revolving door at Ruby Foo's . . . Both courtesy and cleverness are displayed by Willard Room patrons —we've seen parties of total strangers sharing tables rather than wait for vacancies . . . It's all in muscular control, says Frankie Domato in explaining how he takes those amazing falls at Kavakos' Grill without breaking himself in half . . . When skater Rollins whirls his girl partner at the Lotus, he's swinging the equivalent of 1000 pounds with his teeth when he hits top momentum . . . Every night is "Chick-a-Boom Night" at the Copocabana. You'll see the best rumba dancers in town among the prancing customers

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Story of the Saboteurs Occupies Capitol Screen

"THEY CAME TO BLOW UP AMERICA." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Michel Jacoby, adapted to the screen by by Aubrey Wisberg, starring George Sanders and Anna Sten, with Ward Bond, Dennis Hoey, Sig Ruman, Ludwig Stossel, Robert Barrat, Poldy Dur, Ralph Byrd, Elsa Janson, Rex Williams, Charles McGraw Sven Hugo Berg, Burt Kauch, Otto Reichow, Andre Charlot and others. Directed by Edward Ludwig. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

"THEY CAME TO BLOW UP AMERICA," the new Twentieth Century-Fox screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater, states with complete frankness in its foreword that it does not pretend to present a picturization of any official Government records that might be involved in the case, because those records were ordered sealed by the Commander in Chief immediately the trial of the saboteurs before the military commission was closed.

ANNA STEN

It thereupon proceeds to unfold a story of more than usual interest that might easily be the case history of the eight invaders who landed from U-boats on the Long Island and Florida coasts, to be promptly apprehended by the FBI, six of them executed and the other two given long prison terms. The reasons advanced by the film for clemency to two, may or may not be authentic. At least they are such as to give the picture a dramatic punch it would not otherwise possess.

The figure of chief interest in the story is one Carl Steelman, who enters the scene under the stigma of slight traces of treason. Returning to the home of his deeply patriotic German-born parents after an absence of years in South America, he shocks the household by revealing himself as an active Bund member, whose closest friend is one of Berlin's most trusted agents. Upon the interruption of Ernst Reiker's career by the police, Steelman takes his place as the likeliest candidate for the Nazis' school for saboteurs in the Fatherland. What Carl really is, is a trusted agent of the FBI.

The most carefully particularized and most interesting movements of the espionage and counterespionage that comprise the plot are those in Germany, with their presumably accurate review of the courses in destruction devised for the pick of the Nazis intrusted with the duty of blowing up enemy countries. To lend variety and a touch of romantic warmth to the grimmer aspects of the story, Steelman enjoys numerous hairbreadth adventures in aid of a little Austrian member of the underground, and in his jousts with the wife of the defunct agent he is impersonating. A few of these episodes are a shade hard to take, but in the main they add up to the most exciting of the incidents that build the picture's suspense.

The casting of the picture at least offers an innovation in presenting the usually sinister George Sanders as hero, instead of villain. He still is sinister—but only in the view of the Nazis. As Steelman, he gives a straightforward and honest enough performance, frequently more restrained than the predicaments in which he finds himself seem to warrant. One gathers the impression, however, that that probably is the way FBI agents are. The persistence of a slightly Oxonian accent is the only impediment to Mr. Sanders' claim to reasonably complete conviction. Ludwig Stossel and Elsa Janssen are splendidly assigned as his parents, with Sig Ruman, effective, as usual, as Dr. Herman Baumer, the treacherous friend of the family. It is they who inject most of the humor into the piece. The two principal feminine roles in the German sequences are efficiently played by Anna Sten, as the tragic wife of the real agent, and Poldy Dur, recently seen in "Margin for Error," as the Austrian patriot. Dennis Hoey turns in a nicely venomous portrayal of Col. Taeger, chief sufferer from the cleverness of the American he is unable to destroy, even after convinced that Steelman is something less than a devoted son of the Reich. Numerous others, including notably Ward Bond, Robert Barrat, Sven Hugo Berg and Dick Hogan, lend competent support.

Lou Walters' "Latin Quarter Revue," occupying the stage at the Capitol this week, is a pretentious item that begins and ends in the gay and gaudy manner suggested by its title, with numerous specialties and "production numbers" sandwiched in between. First of the detached turns is that of Shea and Raymond, the long and short of it in the field of the eccentric dance. Down toward the end of the spectacular extravaganza comes Emil Boreo, the dynamic creator of "The March of the Wooden Soldiers" in the original "Chauve Souris," whose songs still are remarkable explosions of strange noises. The Bob Fuller Male Sextet, with Jane Wood and Douglas Sylvan as soloists, are heard in rousing medleys, and Frank Marzone and the Abbott dancers practically tear the place apart. Barbara Belmore, the Wally Wanger Girls and the Mme. Kamorova Ballet account for the more formal dancing, assisted by a versatile chorus.

Of particular interest among the auxiliaries is "Wings Up," the Government's exhaustive examination of the training courses being mastered by the Air Force candidates for Officers Candidate School at Miami Beach, Fla., with Clark Gable as narrator. The film does a magnificent job and so does Gable. The Fox Movietone News and Art Brown's singfest are the only additional supplementaries of a "warning" major attraction that seems to be at least as much fact as fiction.

Obviously Exercising Their Hobbies!

ABBOTT AND COSTELLO

the cinema's colossal clowns, in an atmospheric bit from "It Ain't Hay," their latest Universal buffoonery, now on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. The principal feminine role in this hoss-racing hilarity is intrusted to Grace McDonald, one of the more vivacious of the younger singing and dancing comediennes

Bud and Lou Ring the Rafters Again in "It Ain't Hay," Keith's

By Marjorie Kelly.

"IT AIN'T HAY." Universal picturization of a story by Damon Runyon, starring Abbott and Costello, with Grace McDonald, Cecil Kellaway, Eugene Pallette, Patsy O'Connor, Leighton Noble, Shemp Howard, Samuel S. Hinds, Eddie Quillan, Richard Lane, David Hacker, Andrew Tombes, William Forrest, Wade Boteler and Selmer Jackson, plus The Vagabonds, the Hollywood Blondes, the Step Brothers, and Leighton Noble and his orchestra. Directed by Eric C. Kenton. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

A gleeful audience rocked joyously in their seats at yesterday's first showing of "It Ain't Hay," the latest Abbott and Costello. Made from a Damon Runyon story, the A. & C. vehicle depends for its hilarity not only on vigorous manipulation of nearly all known implements of slapstick, but on a multiplicity of situations and gags of the sort that keep you helpless with mirth just at the idea of a mind capable of thinking them up.

Elaborate as a Gluyas Williams cartoon, the story is sublimely indifferent to probability, even to possibility. It deals with the well-meaning efforts of the comic pair to steal a horse honestly. Costello has killed a cab driver's horse by feeding it candy, and he undertakes to replace it. With his sidekick, he goes to a stable where, he has heard, there is a horse nobody wants very much, because it isn't a very good horse. He thinks that would be an excellent horse to steal. It happens, however, that the stable owners, by way of guarding against less scrupulous thieves, have put the greatest race horse in the country, one Teabiscuit, in the worthless horse's stall. And it's Teabiscuit Abbott and Costello steal.

Restitution Is Tough

The rest of the picture deals with the energetic efforts of the pair to return the horse to its rightful owner, and though in the process they go through much more than anybody's fair share of trouble, they survive it with characteristic resiliency. The persistence with which all things work together for good to those who love horses is truly amazing.

Casually appliqued to the plot are joyful musical sequences involving The Vagabonds, The Step Brothers, and The Hollywood Blondes. And, whenever anyone finds occasion to break into song, there, obligingly in the background, is the music of Leighton Noble's orchestra, with the orchestra itself seen in the violent finish of the adventure. Little Patsy O'Connor is appealing as "Princess" O'Hara. She sings "Old Timer" and "Sunbeam Serenade" very prettily.

The box-office favorites manage to give to the quieter moments of the picture—and there a few, sandwiched in between the many shouting, tumultuous ones involving madness, mayhem, and near-murder—all the reflective charm of the Katzenjammer Kids' treetop musings after a particularly destructive day.

Some Notable Shorts

Short subjects shown include the Air Corps Officers' Training School short titled "Wings Up," which Clark Gable narrates. Much more entertainingly made than the average Government short, it packs a lot of information under its sugar coating.

There is, as well, a Mickey Mouse in which Pluto, on a South American trip, gets good-neighborly with a long-lashed, swivel-tailed armadillo. You know, one of those corseted quadrupeds that wear a suit of armor around their middles.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, June 3.

The new Office of War Mobilization may be expanded soon to include representation for Manpower and Labor . . . Wendell Willkie will accept only two honorary degrees this year—from Oberlin and from the University of Alabama . . . There will be an important announcement from Washington shortly, about the infusion of alcohol into gasoline . . . Although Orson Welles has been classified 4-F, he is unable to get a passport to London, to appear in the movie adaptation of "War and Peace." Selective Service won't release him for the trip . . . The obstacle to John L. Lewis' return to the A. F. of L. is its no-strike pledge.

ORSON WELLES

The broadcasters are amending their code to provide for a ban on all those sustaining and sponsored programs for membership-boosting drives . . . Clark Gable, whose ambition it was to become a tail-gunner, had to make a change. Captain Gable discovered that he's too big, physically, to become a tail-gunner. That's why he now is a waist-gunner . . . When Winston Churchill uses his Liberator bomber again, he'll find that the crew painted a large "V," from the floor to the ceiling of the plane, at the foot of his bed. He'll be able to see that "V" even in the darkest night—because the crew used phosphorescent paint.

A third party, which may hold the balance of power in Michigan's voting, will start its organization drive in Detroit, on June 11—when Alfange, the A. L. P.'s gubernatorial candidate in New York, addresses Wayne County Labor's NonPartisan League . . . Paul Osborn, who wrote "On Borrowed Time" and other hit plays, is finishing a novel. After its publication, Osborn will work on the dramatization . . . Friends of the ailing Senator Hiram Johnson report that he recovered from his recent relapse only after his nurse had read to him the story that Governor Warren of California was planning to designate Herbert Hoover to fill his seat in the Senate.

Michael Todd, the producer, sold his interest in the Broadway Theater to the Shuberts. Part of the consideration was the clause giving Todd two theaters to house his next musical and the new Gypsy Rose Lee play which George S. Kaufman is directing . . . Ambassador Standley probably will be shifted to another post. The American Ambassador's complaint about the President using Joe Davies in his dealings with Stalin wasn't the first of his laments from Moscow. Standley also squawked when Willkie carried a Roosevelt message to Stalin . . . Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri may settle for a Federal judgeship.

Andre Philip, who was selected by the six Giraud-de Gaulle committeemen to be the seventh member of this group which will govern the French Empire, was in New York last fall—to tell the story of the French underground, which he organized. During his visit here, Philip stated that De Gaulle had no personal political ambitions and that he would retire once France is victorious and its citizens free to make their own choice . . . The Ritz Brothers are opening their own cafe in Los Angeles. It will be one of the largest in the West . . . Gene Krupa, the bandleader who was jailed on a marijuana charge, was restrained from taking the stand to announce: "Marijuana isn't so bad. I think everybody should try it once in a while."

There's a split in the Democratic ranks at the city council. The Manhattan bloc notified the rest that it will support the continuance of the municipal station, WNYC . . . In the meantime, a committee of New York notables, headed by H. V. Kaltenborn, William Fellowes Morgan and Walter Damrosch, will start a battle to preserve WNYC

A newspaperman who has been waiting for transportation to London saw Lord Beaverbrook sitting with Howe, Canada's Minister of Supply, in the Stork Club. He related his problem to both of them . . . "It shouldn't be hard for you to get to Lisbon," Howe suggested, and Beaverbrook nodded . . . "Then, when you're in Lisbon," Howe continued, "send a cable to His Lordship, to get you a priority on the plane from Lisbon to England" . . . "And then, I can assure you," was Howe's final statement, "Beaverbrook will have a difficult time recalling your name."

HEDDA HOPPER

Tain't Like It Used to Be!

Hollywood, Calif., June 3.—The studio where I made Hedda Hopper's Hollywood shorts has gone to war. It's now Fort Roach, and there's not a civilian in the place except the dear old blind man who sells soft drinks and cigarettes. Even he's in khaki. It's the Army Air force picture studio. Lieut. Frank Shields took me over. I saw many friends—Lieut. Col. Owen Crump, who's in command; Bill Holden, who came up from Texas to do a training film; Alan Ladd, Ronald Reagan, Mr. Gould, head of the art department; Arthur Kennedy, Linda Darnell's bridegroom; Peverel Marley, sound men, technicians from all studios doing a whale of a job. They've got nine pictures in production now. Men from that unit are on every flying front. Paul Mantz is one of them. Another fell out of a bomb rack while he was taking pictures over Germany.

ALAN LADD

That No. 17 Coupon

They showed me three pictures. One called "Yes, Mrs. Doe," runs 6 minutes, but should be shown in every theater. Mrs. Doe goes into a shoe shop, buys a pair of shoes. When asked for No. 17 ration stamp, she says to the owner, "Don't you trust me?" He says, "Certainly, but it's a Government regulation. I must have the stamp before you get the shoes." She turns on him with: "I haven't got the stamp. I had to have a pair of dancing shoes last week. It's just too bad if one of your old customers can't be trusted. After all, I have two daughters working in defense factories. What kind of a war is this anyway? Have civilians no rights?"

All during her harangue you're watching wounded from New Guinea being taken off planes and carried into a makeshift hospital tent and other wounded—the lame, blind and the halt—being taken on board a transport ship to be sent home.

About Pilot's Mistakes

The first picture they did was "Learn and Live"—a six-reeler which would have cost a regular studio at least a million. The Army did it for $200,000. In the Army everybody helps. If a camera has to be moved, the cameraman gives it a shove—he doesn't wait for an assistant. Our former actors work as grips, property boys, juicers—anything. The job is the important thing. Believe me, they're learning how to keep costs down. It will be mighty hard after the war's over to go back to old rules and regulations. Many men at Fort Roach are overage, but they're getting an opportunity to do the things they've dreamed of but never had a whack at until they joined up.

Kid Stuff

Orson Welles is knee deep in rabbits, birds, flowers and bees instead of actors. He's rented a theater in which to do his magic acts. . . . Lionel Barrymore's pet playmate is a kitten. But when a musician brought a lion cub to his broadcast, Lionel got down on all fours. You'd have thought it was another kitten. . . . Nunnally Johnson washes and wipes his own dishes. He's the only producer I know who's got dishpan hands. . . . John Fredericks, actor, doubles between pictures and a night job at Lockheed. The other evening his hands had a narrow escape. They're insured for $10,000. He's a concert pianist.

Bedtime Story

Chicago—The alarm clock that awakened him in the morning to go to work put him to sleep in the evening, Walter J. Pawlowski told Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch.

The sleep came, he testified, when his wife hurled the clock at him. Judge Lynch granted him a divorce.

Family Graduation

York, Pa.—Graduating in the same class at Lower Chanceford High School, Harry Barnett, jr., reported to the Army, and his mother, Mrs. Stella Barnett, went back to housework on the family farm.

Mrs. Barnett, who left school at 16 to marry, returned 19 years later and was an honor pupil.

The Federal Diary

Then comes "Use of drawers." It follows:

"Drawer 1. This drawer is to be divided into three compartments. Compartment 1, counting from front to rear, is for mem pads, pencils and shorthand books. Compartment 2, paper clips, glue, erasers and typewriter equipment. Compartment 3, miscellaneous and carbon paper.

"Drawer 2. This is stationery drawer and should contain envelopes and stationery only.

"Drawer 3, compartment 1, the file drawer where the stenographer will place material to be filled in the central file. Compartment 2, personal effects such as pocketbooks, etc."

Now don't get the wrong idea, dear reader; this is "system for desk procedure" and they say it'll simplify everything at OPA. And it's brought out in the memo that it works fine in the rubber division. (Perhaps they can stretch the drawers there.)

For the benefit of all OPA employes who haven't seen an official's desk, one is pictured in the lengthy memo. I must say that the OPA people who worked up the revolutionary "desk procedure" go a bit intellectual on us in dealing with the drawers of officials.

These drawers are not only numbered, from one to six, but they are given flossy names. I can just see an OPA big shot ordering his secretary:

"Go to the dictate drawer and get me that letter to Joe."

Ha! Ha! I know something you don't know and I'll bet you could never guess where "dictate drawer" is located? Well, I'll let you in on the secret; it's No. 5 drawer. And you don't know where No. 5 drawer is? Anyone should know that. No. 5 drawer is the No. 1 drawer on the right side of either a left or right-handed desk. It's all so simple.

The "dictate drawer" must be divided into two compartments, No. 1 to "contain material which has been analyzed and the executive is ready to dictate on." The second compartment may contain items which the executive deems necessary to keep in his drawers instead of his secretary's or stenographer's. That's what the memo says.

They've really worked it out beautifully for the executives. No. 1 drawer is the "pull drawer"; No. 2, "the work drawer"; No. 3, the "file drawer"; No. 4, "middle drawer," and No. 6, "misc. drawer." There's nothing to it, it's so simple.

Junior economists and junior business analysts, being middlemen in the OPA heirarchy, don't get all the extra trimmings on their drawers. But when the juniors get to be big bureaucrats someday they'll have names on all their drawers as well as numbers.

However, the memo to the juniors sheds a light on the art of filing that has been in use for 50 years anyway. Files, the memo states, "are to be arranged in manila envelopes which you will index on the tab." Apparently the news on how to file is just finding its way to OPA.

Under the heading: "In order to correlate activities" is unwittingly revealed the secret of how to become a successful OPA executive. "It has been proven," the memo says, "that an executive can do more efficient work when he has his work in two piles, instead of having it spread all over the desk. Pile No. 1 should contain all work to be analyzed, and pile No. 2, work completed or analyzed." Moreover, the top of an executive's desk is to be free at all times except when the executive is working. (Maybe he'll have his feet on it then.)

The six-page memo was issued on May 27 by J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator for price who has since resigned under fire. But Galbraith, a former college professor, didn't originate the "desk procedure system." It has been in use for some time in the rubber division.

And why did Galbraith issue it? Well, it seems that he has been concerned over the number of accidents among OPA employes so the memo was issued, as it explains, "to kill two stones with one bird" (and that's what the memo says—I'm not crazy: "to kill two stones with one bird") to bring about a clean shop and safe working conditions. Clean?

Well, anyway, I soon discovered that many other OPA officials don't give a damn about this great and new system of desk procedure. The six-page memo, which took many pounds of precious paper, had hardly been distributed to price division employes when someone, higher up than Galbraith, raised a howl.

The memos were withdrawn from circulation—most of them at least—and they're now a priceless document, as all available copies were ordered destroyed.

Why?

Well, as one official told me:

"It was felt that the public would not understand desk procedure and OPA would be held up to ridicule."

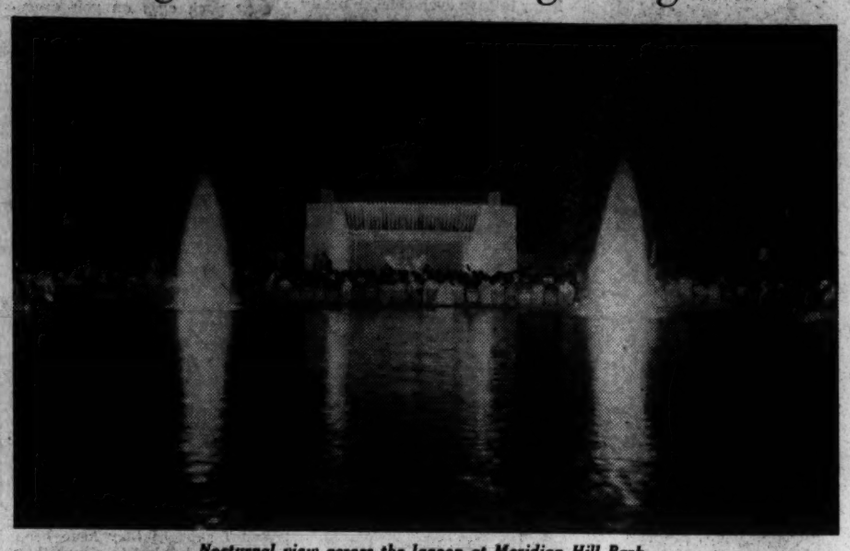
Such a simple and harmless thing, too.

To me it's subjecting employes to ridicule to give them a six-page memo on such a thing. After all, OPA isn't a nursery or a mental institution.

Bob Hope, the Nation's No. 1 comedian, is coming here the night of June 11 to entertain civilian and military employes in War Department's Ordnance Bureau. He'll put on a two-hour show at Constitution Hall. The occasion will be the 131st anniversary of the founding of Army Ordnance. Arranging seats for all Ordnance people has been a terrific job. There are 3800 employes and 3700 seats. Civilian employes who are purchasing war bonds through the payroll deduction plan will be given seats and there are 1700 of them. Each employe will be given a single seat. Seating will be based on the percentage of salary each employe turns into war bonds. The civilians will get the choice seats.

Between 300 and 400 of the 800 officers in Ordnance will each get single seats. Seats also will be given to old-timers in Ordnance, the 160 employes who have served five and more years. General Campbell, Ordnance chief, will give a party for the veteran employes on the birthday of Ordnance and the employes will be given service emblems. Undersecretary Patterson, General Somervell and others will speak. No tickets to outsiders are available.

Post to Give Federal Employes 3200 Tickets To Starlight Concert Series Beginning June 27



Nocturnal view across the lagoon at Meridian Hill Park.

ALBERT SPALDING

200 to Be Presented At Each Performance In Meridian Hill Park

Giving 3200 Federal employes an opportunity to enjoy the music and beauty of its Starlight Concerts The Washington Post will present tickets to employes of the various Government agencies here for 200 seats at each of the 16 concerts it is sponsoring this summer at Meridian Hill Park.

In the midst of the war, The Post is sponsoring these concerts to assure the continuance in Washington of the musical events which in the past have brought delight to thousands. The series has been made possible through the cooperation of the National Capital Parks Service and is under the management of C. C. Cappel.

Away from the heat and noise of this war-geared Capital, where briar roses now flame gently along the paths of Meridian Hill Park, Albert Spalding, the great American violinist, will bring his magnificent music to the opening programs of each series.

General Public Also Welcome

Spalding has played before Washington audiences in the past, but nowhere has he had a setting of more peaceful loveliness, where music and night will blend with dim starlight for the enjoyment of the city's workers.

While the concerts are being sponsored with the thought specifically of providing charm and entertainment for the warworkers in the Nation's Capital, tickets are also offered to the general public at popular prices.

Requests for reserved season tickets may be mailed now to The Post Starlight Concerts, in care of The Washington Post, 1337 E Street, and they will be filled in the order they are received. Prices for each series of concerts—eight on Saturday evenings, beginning June 26; and eight on Sunday evenings, Beginning June 27—are $4.40, $8.80 and $13.20, including tax. Standing room, with no charge to the listener, will be available to those unable to secure seats.

One of the most interesting programs of the series will follow in July, when the eight members of the Trapp Family Singers will bring the moving folk songs of America and other lands to Starlight concert-goers.

Found Refuge in America

Baron and Baroness von Trapp used to live quietly on their estate in the Austrian Tyrol, where they and their large family sang the melodies of Austrian peasants, the simple songs of people close to the earth.

But the Nazis, who confiscated their home, also banished the music they loved, so the family found refuge in America and the opportunity to sing once more.

They are all becoming American citizens. The youngest, little Johannes, was born here in 1939.

And so, to their repertoire of European folk songs, the Trapps have added the songs of the land in which they found freedom. Among the first, Washingtonians will hear the old church music of Palestrina and Mozart, the delightful madrigals of the English Elizabethan days, the songs of Schubert, Brahms and Tchaikovsky and, of course, the melodies and yodels of the Austrian Tyrol.

The Post Starlight Concerts are not connected in any way with the Wednesday night chamber music series, also managed by Cappel. The music will be varied in theme and composition, but throughout the 16 concerts this standard will maintain—to give the men and women of Washington summer evenings of musical delight and beauty.

Army Again Bans Fireworks Here On Fourth of July

The Capital's second wartime Fourth of July will be observed without benefit of fireworks, the Army ruled yesterday. Whether the cancellation of this year's planned Watergate pyrotechnics was caused by fear that the enemy would seize the occassion of the mass gathering to drop some well placed bombs (as was last year's program), or by shortage of the explosive materials was not disclosed.

Instead of the rockets shot from a barge in the river, the Recreational Department is planning for the public to let off its patriotic steam in a song festival at the Sylvan Theater on July 4. Small neighborhood celebrations will be encouraged, but these, too, must be sans fireworks.

People planning to attend the Sylvan Theater singing or the smaller observances are asked to get there by foot or streetcar, rather than to use taxis or private automobiles.

OPA Halts Sale Of Bootleg Potatoes Here

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Determined to stamp out black market potato deals in the Nation's Capital, local OPA inspectors yesterday halted the sale of two truck-loads of the vegetables from North Carolina which were offered at above ceiling prices.

At a late hour the two truckloads still were unsold.

The potatoes came to the Fifth Street and Florida Avenue Market early in the day on 10-wheeled trucks. They were offered for sale, one dealer said, at 6 cents a pound, wholesale, considerably above ceiling prices.

What will be the final disposition of the potatoes was not known, except that a spokesman for the local OPA said they would not be sold at above ceiling prices here.

OPA activity and a recent quarrel over a division of spoils between a local dealer and truckers are credited with elimination of much of the illegal trading that has been prevalent for the past few weeks, legitimate dealers said.

Truckers, who have been instrumental in feeding potatoes to the black markets, are now by-passing Washington and taking their wares to Atlantic City, Philadelphia and other centers.

One carload of potatoes (legitimate) came to the city Tuesday from Florida. Half the car had spoiled and quick work was needed to salvage any part of it. Another car, also legitimate, was expected last night.

Dealers reported difficulty trying to buy potatoes under OPA regulations. They pointed out that 1200 carloads of potatoes were shipped out of Florida and South Carolina last week, and only one or two came to Washington. New York and Philadelphia, they said, have plenty of potatoes, but at prices illegal in Washington.

A shortage of onions was reported, with garlic growing in demand as a substitute.

Potato Theft Charged

George Washington, 29, Negro, of 307 I Street Southwest, was convicted yesterday in District Court of the theft of 55 100-pound sacks of potatoes from a freight car assigned to the Kossow Brothers Produce Co., 1233 Maine Avenue Southwest. Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius charged Washington with taking a truck belonging to the produce company and unloading the freight car. Whereabouts of the potatoes remains a mystery.

Group Urges D. C. Delegate In Congress

Campaign to Win 'Democracy' Here Is Headed by Many District Leaders

Determined to mobilize mass support for the District delegate bill, introduced by Representative Walter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania and up for committee hearings this month, the District Delegate Committee has opened a new campaign to win "democracy for Washington," Chairman E. Barrett Prettyman, former District corporation counsel, announced yesterday.

Calling on "all lovers of the representative form of government" to voice their strong support for the bill, the committee issued the following statement:

"The residents of Washington have an opportunity to remove the shackles of political impotence and gain some of the rights that residents of other cities now enjoy. For too long have the citizenes of the Nation's Capital been without any kind of representation in Congress. The bill introduced by Repreesentative Walter provides for the election of a delegate to Congress to give the District of Columbia the same type of representation that Alaska and Hawaii enjoy."

Among the members of the committee are Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University; Merlo J. Pusey, Renah F. Camalier, Dr. Meyer Jacobstein of Brookings Institution, Frank R. Jelleff, Dr. Wilbur La Roe, jr., Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Helen D. Hoffman, executive secretary of the Washington Housing Associations; Eugene F. Duffield, chairman of the Suffrage Committee of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Lewis Ottenberg, president of the District Legislative Counsel; S. Wilbur Pinch, president of the District Suffrage Association; Richmond Keech, former corporation counsel; Sidney Kats of the C. I. O.; Robert J. Watt of the American Federation of Labor, Alfred M. Lilienthal, Arthur J. Sundlun, former president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Milton W. King and Mrs. Tilman Parks.

'Government Girl' Guards Map Program

The Government Girl Guard of Honor, whose members led participation in The Post's recent campaign among Government workers to raise $150,000 for two planes for the Army and Navy, will meet tonight at 8:30 in the Department of Commerce Auditorium to plan a series of programs designed to further the war effort and provide recreation for Federal employes throughout Washington.

Lenora Haag, a member of the White House secretarial staff, who was chosen temporary chairman at the first meeting of the group two weeks ago, will preside tonight.

Under consideration at the meeting will be a proposed party for the Guard of Honor girls and their guests, to be given during the coming week.

WINX to Dramatize Colonel Brewer's Poem Tonight

"This Is My America," the poem by Lieut. Col. William A. Brewer which was published in The Post April 11 as a front page feature in connection with the start of the Second War Loan campaign, will be dramatized tonight from 8:30 to 9 o'clock over radio station WINX.

The show will be produced by Stanley Howard, WINX production manager, and Lou Brott will act as narrator. "God Bless America," sung by Joyce Romero, will open and close the performance.

Mrs. A. Kyle Goodman Winner Of Takoma Rose Show Honors

IN TAKOMA—Velva Thomas, 1820 Mintwood Place Northwest, admiring blooms at the twenty-seventh annual rose show of the Takoma Horticultural Club which closed last night at the Takoma Branch of the Public Library. The flowers pictured left to right, foreground, are exhibits of Mrs. J. J. Sazama, the best peony in the show by Frank S. Pohanka and roses by Mrs. Henry E. Ewing. In the rear are the displays of M. K. Macknet and W. H. Parsons, all winners

Mrs. A. Kyle Goodman, 9317 Caroline Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., capturing 10 blue ribbons, 1 red and 2 whites, won the sweepstakes at the twenty-seventh annual rose show of the Takoma Horticultural Club, which closed last night in the Takoma Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar Streets Northwest.

Most of Mrs. Goodman's credits were scored in the collection, specimen and hybrid perpetual classes. Second highest winner of awards was Frank S. Pohanka of Burnt Hills, Md., president of the club, who took five blue, two red and two white ribbons. His success was achieved in exhibits of varieties introduced since 1937 and the specimen classes. Pohanka's display of a light pink, Rene Hortense, was judged the best flower in the fifteenth annual peony show held in conjunction with the rose show.

Runner-up in the rose exhibits was Mrs. Henry E. Ewing, 228 Willow Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., who took four blues, one red and four white ribbons in the bush, polyanthus, pillar, and arrangement classes. In the arrangement classes of roses Miss Mae Simpson won four blue ribbons and four third-place awards. She also won the most ribbons, five in all, in the peony show. Her pale pink semi-doubled variety was judged the third best bloom. A deep pink Albert Crousse, grown by Dr. Ella R. Falls, 1914 Grace Church Road, Silver Spring, Md., was selected the second best peony.

Judges for the roses were Neils J. Hansen, vice president of the Potomac Rose Society. He did not select a best bloom in the rose classes. Mrs. Arthur P. Harrison and Mrs. Marshall Knight judged the arrangements. Judge for the peonies and vegetables was Leonard Kephart.

Winners for vegetables were M. J. Murray for letteuce and rhubarb, W. H. Parsons for radishes, and Wilbur H. Youngman for strawberries.

Chairmen of the rose and peony shows respectively were W. H. Youngman and Horace Johnson.

Classes and Winners

Following are the classes and winners: Rose show, collection of 12 varieties, J. Mark Albertson; collection of six varieties, Mrs. A. K. Goodman; specimens, tea and hybrid tea roses, light pink, Mrs. Goodman and Mrs. Ewing; deep pink, Mrs. Goodman, Mr. Albertson and Mrs. Ewing; Etoile de Hollande, F. J. De Moll; Crimson Glory, Miss Marian White, and J. E. Bassett; other reds or crimson, Mrs. Goodman, Miss Irene Haggerty and Mr. Albertson; whites, Mrs. Goodman; light yellow, F. Pohanka and Albertson; deep yellow, Mrs. Goodman; salmon to orange, F. Pohanka, J. Albertson and Mrs. Goodman; single rises, Jimmy Fiedler.

Hybrid perpetuals, red, Frederick L. Lewton and Jimmy Fielder; white, Mrs. Goodman; other rose bushes, Rugosa and Rugosa hybrids, Mrs. Goodman; moss roses, Mrs. Ewing and W. H. Youngman; other roses, Mrs. Ewing, Jimmy Fielder and W. Youngman; Polyanthus, red, F. Pohanka, M. K. Macknet and Mrs. Ewing; pink, W. Youngman and F. Pohanka; yellow to orange, Mae Simpsin, F. Lewton and Mrs. Ewing; climbing or pillar roses, one stem, pink, Mrs. Ewing, W. Youngman and F. Pohanka; Paul's Scarlet and Blaze, W. Youngman, Miss Simpson and F. Pohanka; other reds, W. Youngman, Mrs. Goodman and F. Pohanka; white, Mrs. Goodman and M. K. Macknet; yellow, Miss Simpson and F. Pohanka; salmon, bronze, etc., M. K. Macknet; climbing roses, sprays, 18 inches or less, Mrs. Goodman; spray over 18 inches, W. H. Parsons and M. Macknet; recent introductions, red, F. Pohanka; yellow, F. Pohanka.

Arrangements—For dinner table, roses or roses predominating, Mrs. Joseph J. Sazama; vase, not over 10 inches high, roses only, Mrs. Ewing and Miss Simpson; bowl, not over 12 inches in diameter, roses only, Miss Simpson and Mrs. Sazama; white container of red roses suitable for coffee table, Mrs. Sazama, W. H. Youngman and M. J. Murray; vase or bowl of roses with other flowers or foliage, Mrs. Sazama, Miss Simpson and Mrs. Ewing; basket, not over 6 inches high, of roses with other flowers or foliage, Miss Simpson; miniatures, not over 3 inches in any dimension, Mrs. M. J. Murray, Miss Simpson and Mrs. Sazama; not over 7 nor less than 3 inches, Shirley Youngman, Mrs. Sazama and Irene Haggerty.

Peony winners—Collections, three named varieties, semi or semidoubled, F. Pohanka; single entries, semi or semidoubled pink, F. Pohanka, Dr. Ella Fallis and Miss Simpson; dark pink, Dr. Fallis and Lottie Fahrenbruch; specimen Japanese varieties, Miss Simpson. Other flowers—Pansies, Irene Haggerty, Mrs. Savama and F. L. Lewton; Oriental poppies, W. H. Parsons, Mrs. Goodman and Irene Haggerty. Other perennials—Mrs. Sazama, Mrs Ewing and M. Macknet. Flowering shrubs — Miss Fahrenbruch, F. L. Lewton and W. H. Parsons. Arrangements—Miss Simpson and Miss Fahrenbruch.

Army Hospital Patients, Belvoir Men Give Blood

After a successful visit to Fort Belvoir last week, the District Red Cross mobile unit yesterday went to the Army Hospital at Forest Glenn, Md., to collect blood from patients as well as personnel. The donations will be continued today.

More than 320 donors are expected at the hospital, many of them veterans of the fighting in Africa and the south Pacific who owe their lives to blood plasma collected through the Red Cross.

Last week's visit to Fort Belvoir broke all records by securing donations from 267 per sons, including officers, soldiers' wives, civilian employes and local taxi drivers who volunteered in a body. Since January, a total of 869 pints of blood have been donated in the Fort Belvoir campaign.

Redrafting Of D. C. Bill Held Likely

Hebert Advocates Scrapping of All District Statutes Passed by Congress

Following hearings yesterday before a subcommittee of the House District Committee on a bill to increase the powers of the District Commissioners, Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana, subcommittee chairman, announced that another hearing would be held early next week, with the probability that the bill would be redrafted before its final submission to the full committee.

Hebert, during the hearings, announced that he believed all District statutes passed by Congress should be "scrapped." He said he would substitute a simple paragraph fully authorizing the Commissioners to conduct the business of the District of Columbia.

Under this bill the Commissioners are authorized to suspend, with or without pay, any officer or employe appointed by them. The two members sitting in the hearing, Hebert and Representative Bates (Republican) of Massachusetts, agreed to an amendment making this provision read "with cause."

Only Commissioner present was Commissioner John Russell Young. Asked by Hebert if he was familiar with the bill, Young queried, "Have we seen it?" It was explained that a copy of the bill had been sent to the District Building.

Opposition developed to a section of the bill authorizing a director of inspection, to whom might be delegated all the authority now held by the inspector of buildings, the inspector of plumbing and the electrical engineer. Those who spoke against this section maintained that the identity of the various departments should be preserved, even though all might be coordinated by a single head.

A demand also was voiced for a provision to license electricians, and Hebert indicated such a provision might be included in the revised draft.

There were indications yesterday, however, that the bill would meet with strong opposition in the full committee, and probably would not reach the floor.

City News in Brief

OPA Forum Topic

With debates over OPA policies at the boiling point, the American Forum of the Air will discuss the question of "Subsidizing Food Prices" Sunday at 8 p. m. in the Shoreham Hotel over a coast-to-coast Mutual network.

Defending the subsidy program will be Richard V. Gilbert, economic adviser of the Office of Price Administration, and J. Donald Montgomery, consumers' counsel, U. A. W.-C. I. O. Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota, who has introduced a bill prohibiting the payment of subsidies, and Tom Linder, Georgia Agriculture Commissioner, will oppose the OPA plan.

Federation to Meet

The assembly of the Federation of Citizens' Associations will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Board Room of the District Building.

D. C. Nursing Council Votes To Incorporate for War Funds

The D. C. Nursing Council for War Service, at a meeting in the Medical Society Building, yesterday voted to incorporate, in order to be eligible for funds to cope with acute wartime nursing problems. Action will be taken this week, when by-laws will also be formulated. The group which coordinates the work of agencies related to professional nursing, is comprised of representations of medical, nursing and lay groups.

Due to the demand for nurses for the armed services, it was reported that 250 additional student nurses would be needed for schools of nursing here this fall. The supply and distribution committee reported that although more nurses were engaged in Washington hospitals during the past two months, about 500 qualified nurses are not working due to home responsibilities.

Disaster Preparations

Recognizing that danger from floods is the most serious potential threat to the Washington area, the D. C. Red Cross Disaster Preparedness and Relief Advisory Committee met yesterday to outline disaster hazards and prepare for their control.

The meeting, held in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H Street Northwest, was attended by Charles C. Koones, chairman of the Disaster Committee, and by members of the subcommittee in charge of surveys.

Causes of Asthma Vary Widely, Hence Treatment Differs, Too

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

PEOPLE IN GENERAL display great naivete when asking doctors questions. They say, "Doc" (a friend of mine says he likes to be called "Doc." It shows a spirit of comradeship.) "Doc," what is good for asthma?"

This is naive because it presumes that there is only one kind of asthma, only one kind of person who ever gets asthma and only one remedy for it.

The question is like asking, "What is good for a mother-in-law?" or "What is good for a giraffe?" It depends on whether the giraffe is in Africa or in your back yard. It depends on whether it is a young giraffe, a stuffed giraffe or an old giraffe.

In modern diagnosis the most scientific, up-to-date physician starts out with something that doesn't involve an instrument or diagnostic machine. He starts out with what doctors have done for thousands of years, which is to sit down and take a history of the patient and his troubles.

Study of History Necessary

The reason "Doc" can't answer off-hand what is good for the asthma, or the reason I can't answer some of my correspondents who write in to ask what would be good for Uncle Joe's dyspepsia is that it takes this preliminary period of history-taking to find out about both the patient and the asthma. Somebody said once, "It is just as important to know what kind of patient the disease has as what kind of disease the patient has."

I can illustrate this by condensing the history of a patient with asthma. She was 27 years old and had had asthma for six years. She had it practically all winter and summer. When it first attacked her she was living in her native State, Kentucky. It was a season of very heavy rains and cold and floods, and she ascribes—I believe correctly—the asthma to the fact that she caught cold.

She moved from Kentucky to Mississippi and she still had asthma. Then she moved from Mississippi to Missouri and she still had asthma. She had to quit her work in a munitions plant because the air conditioning made things too cold for her. She has always sneezed a good deal and had a chronic running nose and caught cold easily.

Now analyzing this simply on the basis of the history, we see that it is unlikely that the commonest causes of asthma are responsible for her troubles. In the first place, it is not likely to be the pollen of plants, such as the asthma which accompanies hay fever, because she wouldn't get the same pollens in Kentucky, Mississippi and Missouri. Besides, she wouldn't have the asthma all the year round, and worse in the winter, when plants do not pollinate.

It is unlikely to be due to foods, because she didn't get it until she was 21 and people don't change their eating habits after they are 21. It is not due to house dust, because she got in a room with air conditioning, and a successful air-conditioning apparatus removes the dust. It is also unlikely that it comes from any particular animal dander. The fact that it is perennial asthma indicates that it is an infectious affair transmitted to her chest from the mucosa of her nose.

The history carefully analyzed, is worth as much as all the skin tests in the world in an understanding of the case.

With 32 allies to run among, Fashion has had a field day of native "inspirations." Fortunately, the salutary effect of L-85 plus the present trend away from startling innovations of dress, have squelched the danger of trussing us up like colored illustrations from the National Geographic. Instead, we are being blessed with a crop of refreshing designs which manage to be perfectly wearable while suggesting a faint foreign flavor with great charm.

Among the exceedingly happy adaptations is this blouse. The inspiration is Mexican, and for summer the model is truly inspired. The prodigal gathers of the original have been tamed down to a flattering softness without bulk. The folds that flow from the yoke are imprisoned in a wide band at the waist which may be worn in or outside the skirt and assures a svelte midriff. The neckline has sufficient width and depth to give the utmost grace around the neck and shoulders regardless of the length of the wearer's throat. It makes the ideal foil for either a dinner skirt or its crinkly black Mexican companion piece which, by the way, is excellent in its own right and is impervious to any but its own wrinkles. Vanilla rayon linen blouse . . . about $10. Black spun rayon skirt . . . about $10.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Starving Americans

(Scene—Mrs. Crabbeus Cram, a well-upholstered matron, who in pre-war days was always on a reducing diet and proclaiming that she "never touched anything but tomato juice," is hostess at luncheon.)

"I'm really ashamed to serve fried chicken without mashed potatoes, but John says we'll be lucky to have even chicken pretty soon if we keep on with this crazy idea of feeding the whole world. . . . Oh, yes, that's exactly what they're planning down at Hot Springs! . . . Beg pardon, Mrs. Flint? . . . Just help feed the world? Oh, well, that's all the same thing. We're always the suckers. . . . Have another biscuit, Mrs. Stuffer—no, you better take two and butter them while they're hot.

"Yes that's real butter but I suppose we'll be down to oleo soon if we send a quart of milk to every Hottentot. What, Mrs. Large? . . . Oh, yes, I saw those pictures of the Greek children. I just couldn't stand to look at them! Nobody feels sorrier than I do for those children, and for the ones in Norway and France, too, but just the same, I say charity begins at home.

"No, those tomatoes aren't from our garden, though I can scarcely wait for ours to come on. These shipped in tomatoes just don't have the right flavor. I'm very particular about my vegetables. . . . Yes, that is nice lettuce. I have a very good grocer, or at least I have a very good stand-in with him. He saves the best of everything back for me. Of course I make it worth his while—you've got to watch things like that these times.

"Yes, we have quite a garden. We thought we'd better do something for ourselves if everything in this country was going to be sent to the Arabs and the Zulus . . . What, Mrs. Flint? Only 6 per cent! . . . You don't mean that only 6 per cent of our food's being sent to foreign countries! . . . Well, then, why is everybody virtually starving here? The food must be going some place. There's none in the stores.

"Have another baked sweet potato, Mrs. Chubby, and another one of the pea patties. You'd bettter eat all you can while you can get it. And butter another biscuit—no, you'd better butter two. . . . Oh, yes, I have plenty of butter. I tell you I have a good grocer. He's my boy friend. Well what I mean is, he always remembers me. Honestly I don't see how we're going to live without butter. . . . beg pardon, Mrs. Reade? Yes, I know they say the oleo's reinforced with vitamins, but just the same John won't let it come in the house . . . No, they can't even fool him in the restaurants. He always calls them on it.

"Say, speaking of restaurants, when John's head man was here from out of town they simply couldn't get a decent meal downtown anywhere . . . No! There weren't any steaks anywhere above a tenderloin! It was simply chicken, chicken, chicken everywhere. And omelette! Why, that's a breakfast dish. John says it's disgusting the way they push eggs on you everywhere you go . . . What Mrs. Large? . . . An egg a month in England? Well, but of course the British aren't really used to eggs. No, you see it's all so much harder on us than on people in other countries because they don't have to give up so much. Do have another biscuit, Mrs. Waddle, to eat with your salad.

"What I'm really worried about is this meat situation. There's simply nothing at the meat counter any more except lamb—and none of our family was ever raised to eat sheep—and ham and things like kidneys and brains. That's one reason I had this luncheon while I could at least get chicken. If I waited I might have to come down to sweetbreads and mushrooms.

"How does your son like it in North Africa, Mrs. Posey? . . . Well I suppose they have been through a lot, but in a way they have it lots easier than we do. That is, they get all they want to eat. . . . Girls, I want you to know that's home-made ice cream. . . Yes, we make a lot of ice cream. It's so hard to get Junior to drink his quart of milk straight—he's very finicky about his food.

"Do have some of the fudge sauce, Mrs. Broadhurst. . . . Yes it's a little fattening, but the way I look at it now is that we've simply got to eat sweets to keep up our energy since there's so little of everything else.

"You know John is really worked up over this food situation. He says if we're going to send all our food off to a bunch of foreigners and the people in this country having to starve, there'll be a revolution. Say everybody have some more of the layer cake . . . and please start the salted nuts and the mints going."

Rooms Within Rooms Good Idea

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

"Rooms within rooms" are often necessary in these days of crowded living and boom-town housing shortages. For most structural changes are out for the duration. But "rooms within rooms" are also a good idea even in more spacious comfortable homes—to add charm, glamour and maneuverability and to squeeze the most from modern living. These are best achieved by the abracadabra of screens and movable partitions which have emerged from the fine flights of decorators' fancies and taken their place in the front line of home comfort.

There are several mechanical tricks that make modern screens a lot more practical than the old-timers. Heavy screens that are meant to stay put can be screwed securely to the floor with L-shaped metal braces. Screens that will stay in the same location most of the time should be hooked to the wall to keep them from being knocked over. Heavy screens that have to be shifted around much can be put on casters.

Screens themselves are available in every sort of design and for every sort of use. A simple three-paneled wallpapered screen may be equally important as a "draft-dodger" in a large living room or to camouflage all-in-one-room living. In cramped quarters, a screen can create a kitchen corner or a sewing or an office corner; it can hide a closet for clothing or make a nursery for the new baby.

Naturally the decoration of these screens may often be dictated by the use to which they will be put—if they are to help keep cool breezes from backs of necks in an otherwise conventionally furnished living room, they will conform to the room's standard of decoration—bright and gay for informal rooms, more dignified for formal rooms. If they are to hide a "closet" (made of hooks on a wall for clothing and boxes on the floor for shoes), they should blend as much as possible with the wall decoration (matching wallpaper is a good stunt for a self-effacing screen). If they are to hide a nursery corner, they can do double duty by decorating the bedroom on their "out" side and holding pockets for pins, diapers and other infant necessities on their "in" side.

Making one large room do double as living and dining quarters can be achieved smoothly by the use of two screens, each hooked to the wall on one side for security. These can be drawn together when a partition is needed or pushed back when you want the whole room thrown together. Or a low bookshelf, jutting out at right angles between the living space and the dining bay, will form a practical partial partition. Or a curtain screen (hung from the ceiling on tracks, so it can be pushed back when not in use) is a graceful and efficient idea. A series of shutters painted to match the wall (or in contrast for drama) can be hinged together and hooked to the wall as a partition.

Indignant at Low-Caliber Radio Programs Offered 'Housewives' (Opprobrious Term!), Woman Outlines Her Dream of the Ideal Hour, Giving Food for Mind

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Don't you think it is time to do something about the opprobrious title, "housewife?" Eighty years ago, Goday's Lady's Book staged a successful campaign to eliminate the use of the word "females" to designate women. I presume the term was too biological for Victorian ears. "Housewife" suffers from the opposite fault. It implies a woman married to a house rather than a husband.

Besides, it seems to me that the term is always used with a contemptuous undertone. If one may judge by the popular literature and radio programs dedicated to her, the housewife is an almost brainless creature whose education stopped about the third grade. She can read and write, but she has no intellectual taste or curiosity, no reasoning power and no interests beyond homemaking, clothes, child training and a few related subjects. Well, Miss Haworth, a goodly percentage of our population consists of housewives; and it stands to reason there just can't be that many morons in the country.

Is Housewife Supposed To Be Feeble-Minded?

Most girls in this country are given much the same education as boys, and we know their IQs are equal to that of boys. Why, then, is it assumed that only the feeble-minded marry and make homes?—or that marriage destroys the feminine intellect? If such is not the assumption,—how do you explain the low level of radio programs and women's magazine "literature" directed to women? I am not complaining about the "soap operas," particularly. I suppose there must be an audience for this incredible drivel, or it would not go on forever, as it does. But what I do object to is that there is nothing else to listen to.

With six radio stations operating here in Washington, there is only one 15-minute program that I bother to turn the dial for during my whole housekeeping day from 9 to 6. That is "Baukhage Talking" at 1 p. m. Or, to state it mathematically, these six radio stations broadcast a total of 3240 minutes from 9 to 6, and I listen to 15 minutes,—or less than one-half of 1 per cent. And yet there are few occupations so well adapted to radio listening as housework. It is possible to listen while doing almost any task except vacuum sweeping the rugs.

Urges Radio Lessons in Language, Music and Art

I assume there are plenty of women like myself who go through the monotonous and often physically taxing duties of housework just because it has to be done and there seems to be none but ourselves to do it;—and not because we love it above all things, and haven't a "larger" thought in our heads. And what makes the master-minds think that after spending 12 to 15 hours a day at this kind of work, we want to listen to, or read about, these same things "glamourized?" What I want to think about is something as far removed from "dishpan hands" and "gelatinized spinach mold" as could be imagined.

I wish just one of the six local radio stations would let me outline an hour's entertainment a day for the poor despicable housewife. Do you know what I would plan? First, I would have a 15-minute language lesson,—preferably Spanish. It seems to me that radio is a peculiarly suitable medium for teaching languages, since language should be learned by ear. Then I would have 15 minutes of good music,—not symphonic or chamber music but the lighter classical music. Thirdly, a 15-minute discussion of art, period by period, artist by artist;—and why couldn't the local museums cooperate? I would alternate with occasional discussions of scientific subjects. There are all sorts of things in science I should like to know more about. And lastly, I would have 15 minutes of reading,—and I don't mean "dramatizing,—from the better literature, classical and modern. I can think of dozens of books I should like to hear read aloud.

During this whole hour, no one would be permitted to mention: 1. Housework in any form. 2. The war. 3. Rationing. 4. The "housewife." Of course, no program of the kind will ever reach the air. But I can dream about it, can't I. Sincerely, MINERVA.

New Father's Behavior Is Further Discussed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The lady whose husband appears to have gone berserk since the birth of their baby presents an interesting problem. No less interesting, however, is the letter of comment on the case, published May 31, in which an elderly man calls attention to the pioneering work of Freud in analyzing the erotic nature of man. I agree with this commentator that your column has become something more than a forum for petty personal complaints. You are discussing questions that, only a short time ago, were taboo in "genteel" society; and in so doing you are giving valuable information to people who could not otherwise obtain it, and thus helping them adjust their lives to a new tempo of happiness and a higher standard of behavior.

As your graybeard reader remarked in his letter, sex is one of the most important and least respected aspects of human nature. I might add that it is the very foundation of life, and of all permanent happiness in marriage. The subject of sex is, of course, infinitely complex; and best approached with a groundwork of psychological understanding, which, unfortunately, few possess. As a result, the widespread apathy, ignorance and prejudice toward the subject of sex, which exists even among married people, is appalling. Only a few weeks ago, a storm of public protest was raised against teaching sex hygiene in public schools.

Thinks He May Feel Biologically Inferior

It was Freud, that great Viennese physician to the soul, who first really established the fact that sexual frustration and maladjustment are due more to unconscious or deep-seated fear, hatred, envy and jealousy than to any consciously held, or "rational," notions on the subject. To read Freud's works is to realize that it is not uncommon for a husband to crack up and turn alcoholic after his wife has had a baby,—because he is unconsciously resentful (incredible as it may seem) of what he unknowingly feels to be his inferior biological role.

Also, there have been cases where men have had nervous breakdowns, for obscure emotional reasons, as a result of "anxiety" following the birth of a child to their wife. Some men have reacted by leaving their wife and taking up with a barren woman. In extreme cases the man's mind has become unbalanced or he has committed suicide. How a man "gets that way" is a long story, which began early in his life;—and it is a tragic denouement that could have been avoided in nearly every instance if "sex education" had been given in time.

Favors Open Discussion Of Serious Problems

As your graybeard reader said,—Verily we have much to learn. And your newspaper is to be commended on sponsoring a column which affords intelligent discussion and dissemination of information on the psychological aspects of sex problems,—especially in the face of formerly existing taboos on such subjects, so vitally important to marital adjustment and family welfare, in a world where old forms of security are tottering on the brink of destruction. INTERESTED READER.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

"I know I will walk again," Marjorie Lawrence told me from her wheel chair some months ago. And now she is standing on her own two feet, and with a little help, she is taking steps.

You remember Marjorie Lawrence. She is the beautiful opera singer who was so badly stricken with infantile paralysis she couldn't move. I have told you about her before but I knew you would want to hear about her progress, so the other day I went back to see her.

Everyone could learn a lot about courage from her, but particularly those who think life has handed them a raw deal and there's no use trying to be happy. She believes that when you reach the end of your rope, then is the time to try anew. We all have resources of courage we don't know about, she says, until we are tested. She doesn't think she has any more courage than the next person. It's just that she has been called on to use hers.

Along that same score, she has worked out another bit of philosophy that may help you. She believes in discipling yourself not to think about your troubles because each time despair creeps in sets you back. One day when she feels down—and we all have those days—she is apt to think, "I am so sick of this wheel chair, I could throw it!" But, she told me, "That's wrong. This chair has been a good friend to me all these months," and she gave it a little pat.

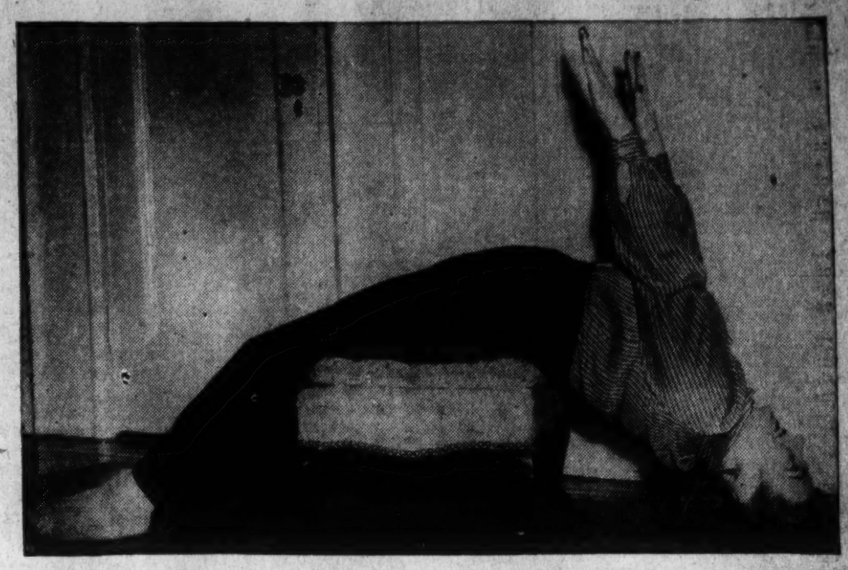
It has been a long, monotonous struggle for her but she has never given up trying. She started exercise when she could hardly move a muscle. At first, it was the passive type, but she kept going on to something harder and for a longer time each day. She now averages two hours a day and the exercises are not easy by any standards. I asked if she ever skipped, and she looked positively shocked, and said, "Oh, no! It is exercise that is helping me!" And she is right. It's the exercise that is making her strong enough to walk again. There is a railing on her terrace and around it she goes, clinging to the rail. "It is like a baby learning to walk," says she, "grabbing at chairs and a handy relative."

The progress she has made in her exercise program is nothing short of a miracle. And the exercises that have done so much toward building her strength will do just as much toward restoring your muscle tone. You have the full use of your muscles and 20 minutes will be enough for you.

Start with this one. Lie face downward on the floor, palms down about chest level, and raise yourself up off the floor with weight resting on forearms and knees. Later, you should boost yourself up until both elbows and knees are straight. This is excellent for the back, arm and midsection muscles.

For the second exercise, lie backward on a low bench—one that is wide enough to support your back, and bend backward until your head is touching the floor. Then come up to sitting position. This isn't an easy exercise so don't repeat it more than three times.

Finish by lying on your back on the floor, arms stretched up on floor, legs straight down, and coming up to stting position, then reaching over and pulling toes toward you. This not only gives your midsection muscles a powerful workout but stretches the leg muscles.



Want to melt away that excess fat and at the same time strengthen the muscle tones? It can be done—the model above demonstrates the correct procedure and Ida Jean Kain in her column on this page tells you how. Ready? Start. Lie backward on a low bench or stool—one that is wide enough to support your back, and bend backward until your head is touching the floor. Then come up to sitting position. Rest and repeat but don't overdo—it's strenuous.

Your Baby and Mine

Since unselfishness is considered to be a desirable character trait and selfishness is disagreeable and unsocial, how are we going to help our children become unselfish?

We have to take it for granted that every child is at first insensitive to the needs or desires of anyone but himself. It's pretty clear what we are trying to accomplish is a way of acting which is the opposite of the natural one.

The best way, though, not always the easiest one, is for a child to live in a home and be exposed to the constantly unselfish behavior of his family. He is told, and shown and it is explained to him, why certain acts are frowned upon and others get smiles and praise. As children want to be admired by those around them, the tendency would be to act as these adults seem to expect, even though at times it would be personally painful.

There may be a hitch, if only the parents are unselfish and the children profit by the unselfishness but no demands are made upon them to emulate it. We've often felt parents who were themselves self-centered and selfish tended to develop children who had to think of the parents before they considered themselves. Their whole education had been along these lines. We don't advise it; we merely note it.

The child gets his first illustration of unselfishness when he is asked to share his dearly beloved toys. He has a strong feeling for them and he is reluctant to let anyone touch them.

We can't force this—since we have to be respectful of his possessions—but we can help him to see that in the end it is to his advantage. Other children have toys, too, and if he shares, so will they.

We must expect such behavior of him but make no great to-do over it, or he will begin to give his possessions away wildly, for the satisfaction of snaring our praise. That may penalize his parents and would be a faulty education for the other child who would get something which rightly did not belong to him.

The job of teaching unselfishness is to help a child see others have desires as well as himself. Personally he must feel some responsibility for gratifying these desires and, while he has possessions all will respect, he gains by sharing and exchanging, thus doubling the pleasures to be had for then he may enjoy his own toys as well as others.

We can't expect a child to be unselfish when young for he must develop some feeling for his own possessions, but by explanation and a steady illustration of the meaning of unselfishness we may hope to put it across with the reasoning child.

Our leaflet "Selfishness and Jealousy," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Use Old Drapes

Lillian McGaw Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Jones

Miss Lillian McGaw, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Edward J. McGaw of Arlington, Va., became the bride yesterday of Lieut. Alan Walter Jones, jr., U. S. A., the ceremony taking place at 4:30 in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral. The Rev. Theodore O. Wedel officiated. The bridegroom is the son of Maj. Gen. Alan W. Jones, U. S. A., and Mrs. Jones.

Colonel McGaw gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore a white marquisette gown, the sleeves edged in ruffles and lace inserts and the skirt ending in a long train also finished in ruffles and lace inserts. Lace also bordered her long net veil. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids.

Mrs. Joseph J. Burrows, cousin of the bride, was the matron of honor, and the other attendants were Miss Hallie-Jesse Jones, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Muriel Lindsay of Cranford, N. J., and Miss Marion Turner of Honolulu. They all wore gowns of white marquisette made with pleated aprons and carried bouquets of red roses.

General Jones was best man for his son, and the ushers were Lieut. John P. Lucas, jr., Lieut. Alexander R. Bolling, Lieut. Lloyd Zupann, Lieut. Joseph W. Hartman, Lieut. Hesler C. Cole, and Lieut. H. Edward Tansey. A reception at the Officers Club of the Army War College followed the ceremony. Mrs. McGaw, mother of the bride, was in a costume of aqua crepe with a rose hat and accessories. Mrs. Jones, the bridegroom's mother, had chosen an ashes of roses gown and with it she wore a white hat and accessories.

After a short trip to northern New York the bride and bridegroom will go to Columbus, Ga., to live while Lieutenant Jones attends the Officers Training School at Fort Benning. For her going-away costume the bride wore a navy blue crepe with a draped bodice, a white pique and navy blue felt hat and navy accessories.

Mrs. Jones attended Edgewood Park School at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., and was graduated from the University of Alabama. She is a member of Chi Omega Fraternity. The bridegroom studied at the University of Hawaii and attended the United States Military Academy.

Rep. Smith Entertains For May Craig

Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, Representative Joe Martin and Representative John W. McCormack were lions among ladies yesterday at the luncheon given by Representative Margaret Chase Smith at the Capitol in honor of Mrs. Elisabeth May Craig, newly elected president of the Women's National Press Club.

The trio of lawmakers dropped in for a few minutes during the course of the luncheon, congratulated the new club president and stopped for chats with some of their special friends.

Several members of the Maine delegation in Congress were guests at the luncheon, as well as the feminine "bloc" in Congress and a group of Mrs. Craig's particular friends of the Women's Press Club. While the luncheon was in progress the latter group presented the guest of honor with a matching turquoise ring and bracelet.

Senator Wallace White was a luncheon guest, and others there included Senator Hattie Caraway, Senator and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Representative Robert Hale, Representative Frank Fellows, Representative Mary T. Norton, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Jessie Sumner, Representative Frances Bolton, Representative Clare Boothe Luce, Miss Marion Martin, Miss Lena B. Haskell, Miss Hazel Pickard, Mrs. Grace Conant, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Morton and Harry Gilson, a visitor from Maine.

School Children Exchange Letters With Young Russians

By Peggy Preston

Don't be surprised to see your grade school youngster arrive home any day now with a Russian dictionary tucked under his arm. He'll be using it to dress up the letter he is writing to another grade school boy . . . in Russia.

It is part of a program being sponsored by Russian War Relief. The specific aim is an exchange of letters between the children of this country and those of the U. S. S. R., and it is based on the theory that impressions and friendships formed in childhood lay the basis for adult beliefs and understandings.

Mrs. William A. Wood, member of the "Write to Russia," committee, explains it in this manner:

"We believe that these little personal letters will do a great good in helping the Russians to understand us and our way of life, and naturally will work in the other direction as well."

New York born, Mrs. Wood, who has lived for several years in Russia, pointed out that the current campaign got under way at the request of Soviet authorities, speaking for the Russian people who wished to express thanks, via letters, for the aid being sent them.

Letters from Russian children to the national headquarters of the Russian War Relief gave impetus to the movement. "They are curious about us in the same way we are about them," Mrs. Wood explained.

The Washington committee has been busy the past few weeks contacting various children's organizations. Cooperating in the letter-writing program are the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Reserves, the Y. W. C. A., the Boys Club of Washington and many other such groups.

Special notepaper may be obtained from the headquarters at 1218 Connecticut Avenue. No envelopes are needed, and letters when written are to be turned over to the committee members, who in turn will forward them to the Soviet Union along with relief supplies. The letters will be distributed to individuals in Russia by authorities there.

Speaking for the committee, Mrs. Wood urged that the letters be as personal as possible. "We want the children to tell about their daily lives, what they study, what games they play and what their current hobbies are."

Mrs. Wood's own interest in Russian children dates back to the years of 1930-33, when she lived in Russia with her tall, white-haired husband, who for many years held the post of chief consulting engineer for the Soviet.

During one famine-struck winter in the town of Kalchugino, Mrs. Wood did considerable relief work in peasant homes and hospitals. Both she and Mr. Wood are Russian enthusiasts.

"Russian women are among the finest and most loyal in the world," she said. "They are the mainstays of the new Russia, and through them and their children may a true link of understanding be formed between our country and theirs."

Audrey Neff, Norma Yonteff Recent Brides

Following a short wedding trip to New York, Lieut. (j. g.) Arthur C. Mullen, U. S. N., will return to his ship, and his bride, the former Miss Audrey E. Neff, will return to Washington to make her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Neff, for the duration. The wedding took place on Monday morning at the Holy Comforter Church, with the Rev. P. J. Begler officiating.

Mr. Neff gave his daughter in marriage. She wore an ivory satin gown with a coronet of seed pearls, which held her long veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of white roses and baby's breath. Miss Catherine Murphy, who was maid of honor, was in yellow marquisette with a matching hat and carried blue delphinium and tea roses. The other attendants wearing blue marquisette and blue bonnets were Miss Mary Cranston, Miss Mary Himmelberg and Miss Helen O'Buen.

Arthur F. Mullen, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Chris Murphy, jr., William Neff and Edward Neff. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom is the son of James Mullen of Whitehall, Mont., and the late Mrs. Mullen.

Davis—Yonteff

Pvt. First Class Burton V. Davis and his bride, who were married May 28 at the home of Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, left after the ceremony for a trip to Philadelphia, New York, Atlanta, Ga., and New Orleans, and will go to Alexandria, La., to make their home.

The bride, before her marriage, was Miss Norma Yonteff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Yonteff of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Davis of Falls Church, Va.

Purely Personal

The Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Escalante have as their house guest their son-in-law, the Undersecretary of the Treasury of El Salvador, Arturo Bustamante. He has come to the Capital to join his wife and young son and will be here for several weeks.

Random Paragraphs and a Poem Gathered in Passing—About Persons of More Than Passing Importance

GRAPEVINE RUSTLINGS: Over any number of Capital dinner tables bets are now being laid, 5 to 1, that Thomas Dewey will turn out to be the Republican candidate for 1944 . . . Democrats are still praying that it will be Bricker, but Willkie has them worried. At a gathering of New Dealers the other evening, somebody plaintively observed, "Trouble with Wilkie is—he's trying to be Mr. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, too." . . . An "Arthur for MacArthur" boomlet has been launched. Senator Arthur Vandenberg takes every opportunity to promote Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the Nation's highest office. "All of which means just one thing," said one of the Senator's colleagues. "Arthur just doesn't happen to like any of the likelier candidates." . . . Latest town talk has it that the Democrats' Chester Davis-for-Vice-Presidency rumor is merely a trial balloon to test whether the country really wants somebody besides Wallace. If so, a man much better known throughout the country than Davis will go on the ticket. You can count on that if rustlings of the Capital grapevine mean anything.

Of Time and a Scribbler . . .

I've always wondered if some weighty manuscripts might one day be collected from desks of those Senate solons who improve each shining hour—and, incidentally, impress visitors in the gallery—by writing busily while colleagues exercise their lungs. The other day, one hoary Senator appeared unusually intent on his own scribbling; never looked up once during a series of spell-binding orations. What on earth was he writing? Surely some world-shattering statement; some postwar plan that would end all postwar plans; some speech that would shake the Nation at its very foundation.

Quite by accident, and the good graces of one of my very special agents, I happened to obtain the original manuscript. At first glance, it looked like a long poem. Actually, it was several revisions of one quatrain. And the final draft was this:

SENATORIAL ANAMALIA

"When I was young, and quite a rake—
I was a 'wolf,' a 'fox,' a 'snake';
But now I find it hard to note

No, I can't tell you the Senator's name. Gave my word I wouldn't . . . on promise from my special spy that he would filch some more weighty writings for me.

Next One, on Postwar Theme

Having cleverly disposed of wartime Washington in his comedy, "The Doughgirls," Joseph Fields is now getting ready to open a new play . . . on a postwar theme.

In town, while his West Coast company of "The Doughgirls" is playing at the National, Fields was among the guests at an informal before-and-after-theater party arranged the other evening by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Casey. Plied with question after question as to how he happened to write his play about Washington, Fields told all.

Seems he came to the Capital a year ago to get into the armed forces. He obtained a temporary job in one of the special services, stayed here a brief time and spent most of that trying to get a hotel room.

"Why don't you write a play about Washington?" asked the then Secretary of the Senate, Edwin Halsey, one day when Fields was lunching with him.

The idea was born at that moment. Fields, nettled by his own unsuccessful siege with the Washington housing problem, quickly made up his mind to use that as his plot basis. Now, the son of Lou Fields (Webber and Fields team), who knows the theater inside and out; grew up in it, and has had two other hits to his credit recently, "Junior Miss" and "My Sister Eileen," is looking for new worlds—postwar worlds—to conquer.

Miss DeWitt Is Bride of Ensign Lewis

Two recent Washington brides are Miss Marjorie Anna DeWitt and Miss Gloria Resta Johnson.

The marriage of Miss DeWitt to Ensign George William Lewis took place on Tuesday in the Bethesda Presbyterian Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. DeWitt of Scranton, Pa., and Ensign Lewis is the son of Dr. and Mrs. George W. Lewis of Chevy Chase, Md.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. J. S. Albertson, and a reception followed at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Wright. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a frock of powder blue with matching hat and carried a bouquet of gardenias and roses. Miss Norlaine Lewis was maid of honor and Mitchell Simons the best man. Alfred W. Lewis and Armin K. Lewis ushered.

The bride was graduated from Keystone Junior College and Ensign Lewis received his degree from Maryland University.

Kehm—Johnson

After a wedding trip, Ensign and Mrs. Lyle W Kehm will make their home in Wildwood Crest, N. J.

Before their marriage, on May 30, the bride was Miss Gloria Resta Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Jessie B. Johnson of Sioux Falls, S. Dak. Ensign Kehm is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Kehm of the same city.

They were married in the Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. George W. Burroughs, jr., officiating. Thomas English of Arlington, gave his cousin in marriage, and Miss Elizabeth Thompson was bridesmaid. Serving as best man was Don Powell.

New Bethesda Hospital Aides Plan Meeting

An organization meeting of the women's auxiliary for the new Suburban Hospital now under construction in Bethesda, Md., will be held Monday from 10 a. m. until 12 o'clock at the Bethesda Women's Clubhouse, Old Georgetown and Sonoma Roads, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Walter E. Perry, chairman of women's activities for the board of trustees.

Invitations have been sent to 125 auxiliary members from areas nearest the hospital, including Bethesda, Chevy Chase, Kensington and Cabin John.

Temporary officers will be chosen while by-laws will be drawn up for a permanent organization. The meeting also will call for the selection of chairmen for working committees concerned with the constitution, publicity, ways and means, membership, sewing, patients' library, social service fund, and collecting of silver for hospital use.

The program for the initial stages of work prior to the opening of the hospital will be discussed. Plans will be formulated for carrying on aid to the hospital which is the principal objective of the auxiliary. The aim of the group, according to Mrs. Perry, is "to assist in building a sound public relations program and to give definite service to the hospital through the use of volunteer women workers."

Services which the auxiliary will consider in its program are: assistance at the hospital's clinics other than public health clinics; sewing and repairing; help in raising funds for extra housekeeping services and furnishings; operation of patients' library; care of hospital grounds; maintenance of rooms; administrative assistance, as well as special programs to interpret the hospital to the community.

To obtain a membership representing all types of social, educational and professional activities, an invitation list was prepared by 18 women with interests in various organizations.

Members of the auxiliary already have filed with Mrs. Perry information about their training and background. They also have expressed themselves as to the types of services for which they prefer to volunteer. Among the group, Mrs. Perry stated, are many professionally trained and experienced women who are willing to give their services. They include registered nurses, nurses' aides, a pharmacist, Red Cross grey ladies, dietitians, a journalist, an M. D., a social worker, teachers, nursery school workers, an actress, a professional photographer, a business executive, a physio-therapist, an interior decorator and expert needlewomen and homemakers.

Several organizations already have begun work to raise funds for furnishing rooms, purchasing equipment and aiding in social service. Other groups are sewing on layettes and operating room socks.

Harry L. Carrico Appointed Fairfax County Trial Judge

Harry L. Carrico, 26, Fairfax County, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Carrico, was appointed judge of the trial justice court yesterday by Judge Walter T. McCarthy. He succeeds the late Judge Abner C. Ritchie.

Carrico is a graduate of the Lee-Jackson High School in Fairfax and George Washington University Law School. He was admitted to the bar last year.

Since last September he has been associated with the law firm of Rust & Rust at Fairfax. He is a member of the Fairfax County Bar Association and the Fairfax Methodist Church.

Judge McCarthy also announced appointment of Robert W. Stump of Fairfax as substitute trial justice to succeed Hugh B. Marsh, who has resigned. Stump has practiced law at Fairfax for many years.

Offices Rearranged

A general rearrangement of offices in the county building at Fairfax was authorized yesterday by the county board of supervisors, following a report of a special committee named to recommend preparation of a card index system for the assessors who will make a general reassessment of real estate in the county next year.

Offices of the county agent and the local Agricultural Adjustment Administration will be moved to the service garage building, where space has been leased by the board, and the county health department will move into the vacated office rooms.

The health office space will be taken over by the commissioner of revenue to provide more room for the land office division, in which the card index system will be set up. Two rooms now occupied by the commissioner of revenue and the zoning administrator will be assigned to the county treasurer.

The zoning administrator will move to a room now used by the land office. Board members said the rearrangement of office space was necessary to provide additional room for the personnel of the commission of revenue and the county treasurer.

A building fund was set up about two years ago by the board to provide an addition to the county office building, but it was decided to delay construction until after the war.

The board considered a request from developers of an apartment project near the Lee-Jackson elementary school in Falls Church of a plan to connect sewer lines to the Alexandria city system, but withheld action.

Red Cross Needs Help

Mrs. Robert N. Landreth, chairman of surgical dressings for the Fairfax County Red Cross Chapter, stated yesterday: "We are appealing to the hundreds of potential workers in Fairfax County who, I feel sure, will accept the challenge and obligation to fill the War Department's great need." Pointing out that commercial manufacture can produce only a small percentage of the vast number of dressings required, Mrs. Landrth added: "Our boys suffer the wounds of battle daily. It is our sacred duty and democratic privilege to do our part."

Following is a schedule of surgical dressings units in Fairfax County where all are welcome: Belle Haven, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 4 Berkley Road, Mrs. A. B. McLeod, TE. 2157; Falls Church, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays, Presbyterian Church, Mrs. George Russell, FA. 1919; Flint Hill, Mondays and Fridays, home of Mrs. Harry Blake, Mrs. Affleck, Vienna 17-W; Fort Belvoir, Red Cross Building, Mrs. L. W. Miller; Franconia, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays and Monday evenings, home of Mrs. Milton Alexander, Mrs. Donald C. Riley, ALex. 5654; Franklin Park, Tuesdays and Thursdays, home of Mrs. Harrington, Mrs. T. J. Harrington, OX. 1907; Herndon, Tuesdays and Thursdays, Municipal Hall, Mrs. E. C. Shull, Herndon 74; McLean, Fridays (day and evening), Masonic Hall, Mrs. William H. Maroney, FA. 809-W-12; Madeira School, Saturdays, Madeira School, Miss Sayre, FA. 1472.

Hilton Enters Arlington Race For Va. House

Arlington County Bureau of The Post.
Arlington, Va., Tel. OXford 0505.

Alfred F. Hilton, Arlington County attorney, yesterday filed his candidacy for the House of Delegates, subject to the Democratic primary, August 3.

HILTON

Hilton, a resident of the county for the past seven years, was graduated from Southeastern University in 1929 and the National University in 1933. He is a member of the Arlington County Bar Association.

Hilton, 44 years old, will be opposed in the primary by Maj. Charles R. Fenwick, incumbent; J. Maynard Magruder and Lawson Wimberly. There are to be two nominations. Major Fenwick is in military service.

While rumors were current yesterday in the county there would be another candidate for the county board before deadline midnight last night, all other candidates are unoppposed.

In addition to four candidates for the House of Delegates, others seeking nomination in the primary are:

For Commonwealth's attorney Lawrence W. Douglas; for State Senate, William D. Medley; for commissioner of revenue, Harry K. Green; for county judge, Hugh Reid; for sheriff, Homer G. Bauserman; for treasurer, Elmer F. Newell; for county clerk, C. Benjamin Laycock, and for county board, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder and F. Freeland Chew. Two members of board to be elected.

G. O. P. Date Changed

The Arlington County Republican executive committee meeting Wednesday night set Tuesday, June 22, as time for the county convention. The convention will be held at Lyon Park Community House at 8 p. m.

It was decided by the committee that there will be no precinct meetings this year to name delegates to the convention. Instead candidates will be named at the convention and all persons subscribing to the principlas of the Republican Party will be eligible to vote at the convention.

In past years it has been the policy of the county committee not to call the convention until after the Democratic primary in August.

Among the prospective candidates seeking nomination are Ralph E Remington for county clerk, Miss Anna Hedrick and William P. Ames for House of Delegates, F. E. Dove for sheriff, it is also understood that Leland Gaines for many years jailer under Sheriff Howard B. Fields will also seek the nomination for sheriff.

John Paul, Arlington attorney, is also understood a strong contender for the nomination for court judge of the County Court. Both J. Foster Hagan and Oren R. Lewis, Arlington attorneys, are reported as seeking nomination of Commonwealth's attorney.

Graduation Week Begins At Chevy Chase

Outdoor ceremonies will mark the beginning of the annual commencement program of the Chevy Chase Junior College, Chevy Case, Md., at 4 p. m. today on the school campus.

High school students will observe their class day today and the Junior College students will participate in a similar program tomorrow at 4 p. m. Presentation of awards for high standing in various subjects will be made tomorrow. The Alumni Association will hold its annual banquet tomorrow at 7 p. m. in the college dining room, followed by a business meeting.

The baccalaureate services will be held Sunday at 4 p. m. at the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, with the Rev. Homer Clifford Richmond, pastor, delivering the sermon. Graduation of both high school and college students will be held Monday at 10 a. m.

Fire Company Survey

A survey of how volunteer fire departments in other States operate will be made by the Montgomery County (Md.) Association of Volunteer Fire Departments, Henry Marschalk, secretary, announced at a quarterly meeting of the organization held last night in Rockville, Md.

Marschalk, who is chairman of a committee on the project, stated the committee wishes to sum up all types of procedure before determining what method of fire work will result in full harmony with county and State governments.

Activities of the Maryland State Volunteer Firemen's Association were described by Noah Joffe, a member of the executive committee of the State organization. Joffe also is a candidate for president.

John W. Cole, former chief of the Silver Spring (Md.) Fire Department, who recently returned from Hawaii, told of his experiences with the Pearl Harbor Fire Department.

Presiding was Irving W. Johnson, Takoma Park, president of the association composed of the 12 volunteer fire departments in Montgomery County.

Defense Drill Called Off

The test mobilization drill of the Montgomery County (Md.) Civilian Defense scheduled for Monday night has been called off because of the gasoline situation, Judge Albert Brault, civilian defense director of the county, announced last night.

Rear Admiral Hamlet Named To Head Montgomery Defense

Appointment of Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, U. S. C. G. (retired) and Congressional Medal recipient, as chief air-raid warden for Montgomery County, Md., was announced yesterday by Judge Albert E. Brault, civilian defense director.

The new appointee who is deputy precinct warden for the Sixth Precinct, Seventh District, in Chevy Chase, lives at 6410 Beechwood Drive, Chevy Chase. He has been in the air-raid warden service since its beginning.

Judge Brault said he felt the admiral's extensive experience in organization and handling men will be evident in the increased efficiency of the warden service and that his retired status would permit him to give considerable time to the duties of the post.

Admiral Hamlet was appointed commandant of the Coast Guard by President Roosevelt, June 14, 1932 and retired September 1, 1938, at the age of 64.

One of the heroes of the Coast Guard, Admiral Hamlet, was aboard the old cutter Bear on her relief expedition to the Arctic in 1897-98. He received the Congressional Gold Life-Saving Medal of Honor when the U. S. S. Marietta, of which he was in command, rescued two officers and 45 men from the U. S. S. James in a gale off France in April, 1919.

A native of Eastport, Me., Admiral Hamlet is the son of Capt. Oscar Hamlet of the old revenue cutter service. He was graduated from the Coast Guard Academy in 1896 and in 1900 was assigned to the Naval War College at Newport, R. I.

During World War I he was assigned to the Third Naval District, joining the naval forces at Brest in 1918 when he assumed command of the Marietta. When Congress made provisions for the acquisition of additional vessels for the Coast Guard in 1924, he was ordered to the Philadelphia Navy Yard, where he superintended the reconditioning and commission of 20 destroyers turned over to the Coast Guard by the Navy. In July, 1926, he was placed at the head of the Coast Guard destroyer force. He was commandant of the Coast Guard Academy in 1928.

State to Scan Montgomery's Milk Laws

Proposed changes in the Montgomery County milk regulations are being forwarded to the State Department of Health, Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, announced yesterday.

Reenactment of present regulations, adopted December, 1935, is necessary, according to a recent interpretation of the State milk law. New local regulations must have the approval of the State Board of Health.

Principle changes proposed are: Dairy farmers and distributors will have the right to appeal the health officer's degrading or revocation of permit without first being required to comply. The proposals call for numerical score sheets prescribed only for Grade A shipper and retailers.

Dairy farms using score sheets will be required to comply with the following regulations:

Three square feet of window area per stanchion, 500 cubic feet a stanchion, 50 feet between manure pile and barn in winter only, tight container for storage of filter discs, washing of teats with antiseptic solution before milking and two-compartment rinse vats for Grade A shippers.

Bottle caps of Grade A pasteurized milk must cover the pouring lips of the bottle. It is proposed that the bacterial counts for pre-pasteurized Grade A limit be reduced from 200,000 to 100,000, and Grade A pasteurized reduced from 30,000 to 20,000.

Both the present and proposed regulations provide for the sale of Grade B pasteurized milk, but none of this milk has been sold so far in Montgomery County. The Grade B prepasteurized bacterial limit is being changed from 500,000 to 200,000.

Refrigerator Meals Offer Advantages For Busy Wartime Cooks

Time was when the little woman who didn't slave over a hot stove all afternoon preparing dinner wasn't considered a serious homemaker. Now, with Red Cross, Victory gardens, home canning, sewing and extra sprinting all to be done by the chief cook and bottle washer, long tedious meal preparations have to be shelved.

There's another good reason besides the time element. Washington summers don't warrant hot, heavy meals. Food rationing means that we should eat only enough to give us good nourishment.

We are all food-conscious. We could scarcely escape being when next to the actual war news we have it given to us from all sides in life-sized doses. But that doesn't mean that we should go out and buy just to see what purchases we really can effect.

The announcement of OPA yesterday that the preferred cuts of beef, such as steaks and roasts, will require more red stamps beginning next Sunday, means that there won't be as many steaks and roasts eaten. Some of the lamb, veal and pork cuts have been reduced in point value. So we can still use them to make many a delicious and nutritious dish.

Meat loaves and cold cuts will continue to be the cook's aid. The loaves can be cooked in the morning and then placed in the refrigerator to be used at lunch or dinner. Many delicious salads can also be made and placed in the refrigerator. And jellied bouillons are most appetizing. Frozen desserts, too, can be made and stored away.

Let's cook cool today and see what appetizing meals can be concocted. We can always serve a hot bread and a steaming beverage to supply the hot food. Here is a suggested menu for an evening meal.

Dinner Platter Menu

Cold Sliced Meat Loaf
Tart Frozen Appetizer
Asparagus Bundles
Vegetable Salad in Orange Cups with Lemon French Dressing.
Hot Rolls Butter
Strawberries and Cream
Hot Tea

To give the meat loaf that additional touch make a tart frozen appetizer by the following recipe:

TART FROZEN APPETIZER

Grate four apples fine and add the juice of two lemons and two oranges. Add red or green vegetable coloring to suit taste. Place in freezing compartment of refrigerator and freeze until icy. Serve with meat in scooped-out lemon half-shells.

Because either French dressing or mayonnaise are delectable on a vegetable salad, the recipes for both are given. Take your choice, they are both appealing.

LEMON FRENCH DRESSING

Mix together ½ cup lemon juice, ½ cup salad oil, 1 teaspoon each of salt and paprika, and 2 tablespoons either sugar or honey. Shake well before serving. Yield: about 1 cup.

LEMON MAYONNAISE

Prepare ¼ cup lemon juice. Beat 1 egg or 2 egg yolks with 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 1 teaspoon each of mustard, salt and sugar. Add 2 cups salad oil very slowly until mixture begins to get very thick. Then add the remainder of the lemon juice. Gradually beat in the rest of the oil and continue beating until well combined. Yield: about 2½ cups.

A frozen vegetable will also score a hit on a hot day. We should use fresh vegetables while they are plentiful from the summer crop. Here is a recipe for a delicious frozen vegetable salad:

FROZEN VEGETABLE SALAD

Sift 2 teaspoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon mustard, 4 tablespoons sugar; add to 2 beaten egg yolks; stir in ½ cup vinegar and cook in a double boiler until the mixture is thick. Add 4 tablespoons butter and 1 cup chicken broth and cool. Pour into freezing tray and freeze for 3 hours. In the meantime prepare 1½ cups tomatoes, diced; ½ cup celery, diced; 2-3 cup cucumber and one third-cup green pepper. Drain the tomatoes and soak the celery, pepper and cucumber in salt water. Then drain well, add to the partly frozen dressing and return to freeze for 1 hour longer. Serves 8 to 10.

A jellied bouillon, too, is a food which will hit the spot on humid days. It can be ready and waiting in the refrigerator for that final touch of parsley. Here is the recipe:

JELLIED CHICKEN BOUILLON

Combine 3 cups chicken broth (or 1 can chicken bouillon and sufficient water to make 3 cups of liquid) and ½ teaspoon celery salt and ¼ teaspoon salt. Heat to boiling point. Add 1 tablespoon gelatin dissolved in ¼ cup cold water. Chill for 2 or 3 hours. Serve in bouillon cups and top with chopped parsley.

One good way to use your red coupons is for salmon to make a flavorsome molded loaf. The recipe follows:

MOLDED SALMON LOAF

Mix 1½ teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, 2 teaspoons flour, 1 teaspoon mustard, a few grains cayenne; add the yolks of 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon melted butter, ¾ cup milk and ¼ cup vinegar. Cook in top of double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add to 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin which has been soaked in 2 tablespoons cold water. Add ½ cup chopped cucumber, 1 cup flaked salmon, ¼ cup chopped olives and ¼ cup chopped celery. Pour into freezing tray and chill. Serve on lettuce.

Some chicken broth, a cup and a half of minced chicken and a few other ingredients will produce a chicken mousse that will bring "ohs" and "ahs" from diners. Make it this way:

CHICKEN MOUSSE

Pour 1 cup hot chicken stock over 2 beaten egg yolks and cook in a double boiler until thickened. Add one eighth teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, 1½ cups minced chicken, ¼ cup chopped olives and ¼ cup chopped almonds. Cool and fold in ½ cup cream. Pour into freezing trays and chill until firm, about two hours. Cut in slices and garnish with lettuce or parsley.

Here's a foursome platter which can be served with the least possible fuss, yet it has what it takes to make a hit. The blending of the colors of the foods creates a pretty picture. The meat loaf, appetizer, and orange cups can be made and tucked into the refrigerator. The strawberries can be cleaned, too, and be ready unless you use quick-frozen ones; then they don't have to be prepared Cook the asparagus, make the tea, and heat the rolls and your meal is complete

Pound of Beef Makes Flavorsome, Nutritious Dish

One pound of ground beef combined with nutritious all-bran, tomatoes, green pepper and seasonings makes a dish that guarantees to make a little meat go a long way. That is something all cooks are considering.

Then too the all-bran and tomatoes furnish excellent nutrition as well as appealing flavor. Here is a recipe that you can whip up in a jiffy. If you don't need such an amount, then cut the recipe in half and it will be just as good.

ALL BRAN TAMALE PIE

Add ¾ cup cornmeal to boiling salted water. Cook until thick. Add ¼ cup all-bran and spread on bottom and sides of 8 inch baking dish to ¼ inch thickness. Cool. Brown ½ clove finely minced garlic in fat. Add 1 pound ground beef and cook, stirring to break meat into pieces. Add ½ cup chopped green pepper, 2½ cups cooked tomatoes and seasonings of 1½ teaspoons salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Simmer until juice from vegetables has partially evaporated, about 15 minues. Pour into baking dish on top of cooled mush. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400 F., about 15 minutes. Yields 8-10 servings.

Use Crisp Crumb Coatings

Clever homemakers are learning to use ready-to-eat cereal crumbs whenever recipes call for a crumb coating. For time is at a premium these days, and ready-to-eat cereals are so crisp that only a few seconds is required to roll them into fine crumbs.

All the popular products of the world's largest manufacturer of ready-to-eat cereals are either made from whole grains or are restored to whole-grain nutritive values of thiamin (Vitamin B), niacin, and iron. They furnish valuable food elements, as well as extra flavor, to any dish in which they are used.

Cereals Nonrationed

Ready-to-eat cereals take on new importance these days, for they are an inexpensive, nonrationed food. When made from whole grains or restored to whole-grain nutritive values, they provide essential vitamins and iron, as well as needed food energy.

Maple Syrup Muffins Make Breakfast Treat

Sunday morning is the right time to treat the family to delicately light waffles or fresh hot bran muffins served with plenty of butter. Syrup or honey must be on the table, too, unless one of these highly favored sweets is already included as an ingredient in the batter, as it is in the following excellent recipe:

MAPLE SYRUP MUFFINS

Beat 2 tablespoons shortening and 1-3 cup maple syrup together; add one egg and beat well. Add 1-3 cup milk and 1 cup bran; let soak until most of the moisture is taken up. Sift together 1 cup flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon soda. Add to first mixture, stirring only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven, 400 degrees, about 25 minutes. Yield, eight muffins.

You'll find this unrationed whole wheat cereal a big help

Of course it's harder to arrange meals under point rationing, but Nabisco Shredded Wheat has many benefits to offer in helping to keep your family well fed—you'll be thankful it is plentiful!

It is famous as the energy breakfast, and more important than ever as a supplement to meat and other dishes. Nabisco Shredded Wheat contains protein, is rich in valuable minerals such as iron and phosphorus, and is a good source of Vitamin B_1, as nature provides it.

RECIPE

SHRIMP BASKETS

Melt 4 tablespoons fat in saucepan and add 4 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of cayenne pepper. Slowly add 2 cups milk and cook until thick. Add 1 cup grated cheese and stir until melted. Make rectangular shaped hollows, 1½" x 2½" in 6 NABISCO SHREDDED WHEAT. Fill hollows with 2 pounds cooked fresh shrimp from which shell and vein have been removed. Pour sauce over each and garnish with egg wedges. Serves 6.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

In the future, if you visit the Arctic regions you may have reason to complain about the temperature, but not the food.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

For you will find fruits and vegetables — dehydrated — plus your favorite meat. So predicts Senator Aiken of Vermont, guest speaker at the annual luncheon meeting of the Petworth Woman's Club yesterday at the Kenesaw.

"A revolution in methods of processing and handling food is bound to be a result of this war," Senator Aiken said. "Fruits and vegetables dehydrated in the tropics will be refreshed and used on menus in the Arctic regions, and they taste almost as good as when first picked. Meats, fruits and vegetables of all kinds will be quick frozen by processes which will retain flavors, vitamins and nutritional values."

These foods will be transported at subfreezing temperatures to all parts of the world. Even unprocessed fresh fruits and vegetables from any part of the world may be delivered to any other section as quickly and as fresh as we now get them from sections of our own country, according to Senator Aiken.

"Intercontinental transportation of food by air or improved methods of ocean shipping will become one of the world's greatest industries, giving new employment to millions of people," he declared. Regional diseases due to malnutrition will disappear gradually. People will learn how, what and why to eat. We will eat cheaply, too, for we will save much that now goes to waste."

Preceding Senator Aiken's talk, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, gave greeting. Mrs. Henry John Smith pronounced the invocation.

A parody on food rationing written by Mrs. Liefie Dietz was sung to the tune "Pass the Ammunition." Mrs. Frank J. MacMaugh, retiring president, welcomed Mrs. C. Malcolm Scates, incoming president, who takes over the gavel on June 7.

Honor guests were Mrs. Ellis Logan, organizer of the club; Miss Charlotte Clark, librarian of the Petworth Library; Mrs. L. P. Wilson and Miss Gretchen Smith. The past presidents attending were Mrs. S. W. Norton, Mrs. W. A. Winkelhaus, Mrs. L. T. Jones, Mrs. R. E. Holm, Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, Mrs. Oscar Nelson and Mrs. Frank M. Stuart. Mrs. Natalie Fernald and Mrs. A. O. Norcross were charter members present.

Phantom Card Party

A phantom card party is scheduled by the Girls Friendly Society of Washington for tomorrow. Due to the gas shortage, the guests will be there in "spirit" only, but it is hoped that all the tickets will be sold and all tables filled ($4 per table and $1 per single ticket). The proceeds will be used for the Children's Project of Holiday House.

Mrs. George Pariseau is the chairman of the committee in charge. Helping her are Mrs. E. B. Meigs, Mrs. Daniel Miller, Miss Alida Haines, Mrs. B. Lawriston Hardin, Mrs. Alexander Stewart, Miss Elsa Needham, Miss Annabel Tillett, Miss Elizabeth Keysor, Miss Clara Nourse, Miss Helen Milliken, Miss Marjorie Zug and Miss Clara Bubb.

Miss Eversman Rechosen

Alice Eversman, music editor of the Evening Star, has been reelected president of the American Newspaper Women's Club. Genevieve Reynolds, club editor of The Washington Post, has been chosen first vice president; Babs Lincoln, publicity writer, second vice president; Virginia Price, press relations of War Manpower Commission, corresponding secretary; Lillian Arthur, Evening Star, treasurer, and Alice Hutchins Drake, Haskin Sydicate, historian. The board elected for the ensuing club year consists of Marie McNair and Elizabeth Henney, both of The Washington Post; and Katherine McKiever, NCWC News Service.

Doings of the Day

Monticello Chapter, D. A. R., celebrates its thirty-fifth anniversary tomorrow night, 8 o'clock, at the home of its regent, Mrs. William Johnson, 1730 Irving Street Northwest . . . Washington Chapter, SPECIAL LIBRARIES ASSOCIATION holds dinner meeting and election of officers tonight, 6:30 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A., according to Miss Ruth Fine, chairman of the social science group. Mrs. Anna Hughes, librarian of the Federal Public Housing Authority, is taking reservations . . . DOLLOGY CLUB OF WASHINGTON meets tomorrow, 2 p. m. with Mrs. F. Meara at the Dorchester House. A committee, composed of club members, headed by Mrs. William Meggers, chairman, will discuss "Doll Collections and Collectors." Each member will bring her first doll for exhibit.

Noel Hall to Speak

How the war is affecting Britian's antiquities will be revealed by the British minister, Noel Hall, guest of honor and speaker at the annual get-together of the Washington Branch Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. The event will be a luncheon, tomorrow, 1:30 p. m. at the Washington Club. The chaplain, the Rev. G. Freeland Peter, will offer the invocation. Mrs. Everard Robinson Todd, director, will preside assisted by the following vice directors: Mrs. William O. Owen, Mrs. Jesse Lee Webb and Mrs. Henry St. George Tucker. Mrs. Malton Boyce will give several piano selections.

Still other guests are: Lady Dill, wife of Field Marshal Sir John Dill; Mrs. G. Freeland Peter, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Underwood, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis, Mrs. Horace Vandeventer, Mrs. Guy Mason, Mrs. Joseph S. Wall, Mrs. Finley Calvert, Mrs. William Cabell Moore, Mrs. Gilham Morrow, Mrs. Harry Robinson, Mrs. Pat Harrison, Mrs. Eugene Octave Sykes, Mrs. Theodore Coe, Mrs. F. W. Pearson, Mrs. Robert Kennedy, Mrs. Adolphus Bennett, Mrs. Mason Smith, Mrs. Ray Palmer, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, Mrs. Otis Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Phillips and many others.

Mrs. Talbott Installed

Mrs. Franklin B. Talbott received the gavel from Mrs. C. Russel Shetterly, outgoing president of the Silver Spring Woman's Club, at the annual spring luncheon yesterday. Other newly installed officers are: Mrs. James E. Daly, first vice president; Mrs. James W. Douthat, second vice president; Mrs. George W. Eastment, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert C. Steele, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Shirley F. Workman, treasurer, and Mrs. Albert R. Janes, federation director.

Mrs. Steele was presented with a General Federation war service pin for her outstanding work as chairman of the American citizenship and education department.

The retiring president was presented with a past president pin by the vice president, Mrs. Richard C. Palmer. Vocal setections were rendered by Mrs. Louis B. Schneider, accompanied by Mrs. Harris White.

Heights Club Election

Mrs. Oliver E. Sweet has been elected president for the ensuing club year of the Sixteenth Street Heights Woman's Club; Mrs. J. Preston Swecker, vice president; Mrs. Harold Barss, secretary; Mrs. G. Albert Scott, treasurer; Mrs. E. V. Crittenden, parliamentarian, and Mrs. William H. England, custodian.

Armour's Meat Ration Meals

9 Meat Meals for the week — Planned for a FAMILY OF 4

Marie Gifford, Armour's food economist, starts this week's meals for a family of 4 with a hearty Roast Leg of Star Lamb...Shows how to stretch the family's 64-point allowance over 6 meat dinners, 2 lunches and a breakfast—including butter and shortening. Market order below shows exact quantities to order.

SUNDAY — Red Stamp Points — 36
(Provides meat for 3 dinners and 2 lunches)
Roast Leg of Lamb★ Brown Gravy
Mint Jelly Mashed Potatoes
Beets and Beet Greens
Avocado and Orange Salad
Raspberry Sherbet Cookies

Five of this week's meals are based on your Sunday roast, so choose it with care. Get a young, tender leg of lamb by asking for Armour's Star.

MONDAY (Leftovers)
(Have 4 sirloin lamb steaks cut from the heavy end when you buy the leg.)
Broiled Sirloin Lamb Steaks★
Broiled Tomatoes Frenched Green Beans
Head Lettuce French Dressing
Spice Cup Cakes White Frosting

TUESDAY — Red Stamp Points — 3
Barbecued Frankfurters★ on Toasted Rolls
Creamed Peas Mixed Green Salad
Apple Crisp Cream

Recipe:
BARBECUED STAR FRANKFURTERS
6 Star Frankfurters (about ½ to ¾ lb.)
6 Frankfurter Buns
BARBECUE SAUCE:
1 tbsp. Cloverbloom Butter or margarine
½ cup chopped onion
1 tsp. paprika
½ tsp. pepper
4 tsps. sugar
1 tsp. mustard
4 tsps. Worcestershire Sauce
¼ tsp. Tabasco Sauce
¼ cup catsup
3 tbsps. vinegar

Melt butter, add chopped onion and cook until clear. Add dry seasonings, sauces, catsup and vinegar. With a sharp knife cut 3 inch slit in each frankfurter. Place frankfurters in flat baking pan, slit side up. Pour sauce over all and bake in 350° F. oven for 20 minutes. Baste frankfurters with sauce. To serve, place frankfurters in split, toasted, buttered buns. Garnish with fresh green onions. Makes 6 frankfurter rolls. Because they're made fresh daily Armour's Star Frankfurters give extra zest to this dish.

WEDNESDAY (Leftovers)
Lamb Curry★ on Rice Buttered Asparagus
Cabbage Green Pepper Slaw
Fresh Pineapple and Strawberries

THURSDAY — Red Stamp Points — 2
Creamed Star Cervelat★ and Hard Cooked Eggs on Toast
Fresh Spinach Tomato and Cucumber Salad

FRIDAY — (not rationed)
Fried or Baked Fish Lemon
Creamed Cabbage Buttered Corn
Jellied Vegetable Salad Baked Custards

SATURDAY — Red Stamp Points — 5
Star Pork Liver Patties★
Creamed Potatoes and Buttered Carrots
Stewed Tomatoes Berry Shortcake

Recipe: STAR PORK LIVER PATTIES
1 lb. Star Pork Liver
½ cup chopped onions
1 Cloverbloom Egg
1½ tsps. salt
¾ cup dry bread crumbs
4 tbsps. fat

Place liver in hot water for 10 minutes, grind coarsely. Mix with onion, egg, salt and bread crumbs. Form into 8 small patties, about ¼ inch thick. Brown in fat, 6 minutes per side. Too long cooking will develop a strong flavor. Serves 4. Serve with buttered carrots.

PLUS

Grapefruit Juice, Crisp Star Bacon★ (½ lb.) with Waffles and Sirup. Coffee.

TUESDAY LUNCH (Leftovers)
Serve a Lamb Vegetable Casserole with Jellied Fruit Salad, Leftover Spiced Cakes for dessert. Cocoa.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Bad Medicine Chest — By Milton Caniff

IS IT NOT BEAUTIFUL, MY HUSBAND? THE NO-NAME ONE GAVE IT TO ME BECAUSE I ATTEND HER WELL...
AH—THEN YOU ARE THOUGHT HIGHLY OF BY THIS PALE THING?
OH, INDEED!
GOOD...IT IS TIME, THEN, THAT YOU BEGIN TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF YOUR POSITION...
...WHAT MADNESS IS THIS?
WHEN THE YANKEE SAILMEN CLUSTER ABOUT—YOU ARE TO REPEAT TO ME ALL THAT IS SPOKEN!
YOU ARE DEALING WITH THE LITTLE MEN OF THE NORTH AGAIN...I WILL NOT—WHERE ARE YOU GOING?
TO FETCH THE LASH... IT IS SHAMEFUL THAT I TOOK A WIFE WHO REMEMBERS HER BEATINGS SUCH A SHORT TIME!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

NO?
I HAVE AN EIGHT O'CLOCK ASSIGNMENT TOMORROW··AND A MODEL IS SUNK IF SHE LOSES SLEEP!
YA MEAN I'VE DRESSED UP LIKE AN ADMIRAL FOR NOTHIN'?
SHUT UP, SAM··! NOW LOOK, LITTLE ONE! WE'LL ONLY TAKE A TURN AROUND THE SOUND, I'LL HAVE YOU BACK AT YOUR HOTEL BY ELEVEN!
WELL···OF COURSE, I'D HATE TO SPOIL YOUR PLANS···!

MICKEY FINN — Reunion in Norfolk! — By Lank Leonard

MR. AND MRS. — No Place Like Home — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

NOW TO PILE UP THESE PILLOWS AND ENJOY A GOOD LOAF BEFORE DINNER
JOE! WHAT ARE YOU DOING? TAKE YOUR HEAD OFF THAT PILLOW THIS INSTANT!
WHAT'S MATTER WITH MY HEAD?
THAT'S MY BEST SOFA PILLOW IT'S NOT MEANT TO LIE ON. AND YOU HAVE YOUR FEET ON A PILLOW, TOO!
I PUT ON MY SLIPPERS

DIXIE DUGAN — A Vacation — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

THE ANTI-DIXIE DUGAN CLUB HAS COMPLETELY DISSOLVED—
THE CHILDREN AGREE TO FACE A VACATIONLESS SUMMER WITH A SMILE!
WELL—YOU'VE SETTLED THAT JUVENILE UPRISING!
I DIDN'T SETTLE IT—THEY DID THEMSELVES
IT TAKES A LITTLE PATIENCE BUT REASONING IS BETTER THAN TRYING TO POUND SOMETHING INTO THEM—
I'M STILL WORRIED ABOUT THOSE CHILDREN—
—AND HOW WE CAN GIVE THEM A VACATION
HUH??!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — He's the Man — By Frank Martinek

I WANT THE NAME OF THE MOST AMATELRISH AND ECCENTRIC INVENTOR YOU HAVE LISTED IN YOUR FILES!
PRAY TELL, WHY THE MOST ECCENTRIC?
WELL, ONE OF MY GOOD FRIENDS, A FAMOUS INVENTOR IN THE AUTOMOTIVE FIELD, ONCE SAID... ALL GOOD INVENTORS ARE AMATEURS WHO NEVER BECOME PROFESSIONAL AND THE MORE PECULIAR THEY APPEAR TO THE OUTER WORLD THE MORE IDEAS THEY RECEIVE FROM THE UNSEEN WORLD!
COMMANDER, HERE IS THE MOST PECULIAR INVENTOR WE HAVE ON OUR LIST... HE JUST MISSES THE MARK OF DEVELOPING SENSATIONAL INVENTIONS. HOWEVER, I WOULD NOT RECOMMEND HIM AS HE APPEARS TO BE VERY ODD!!
THAT'S OUR MAN!! WHAT'S HIS NAME AND WHERE DOES HE LIVE?

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

YOU MAKE UM BIG MISTAKE 'BOUT STEVE ROPER! HE ONLY ACT LIKE RAT TO FOOLUM REAL SABOTEURS! HE WORK ALL TIME FOR BIG CHIEF IN WASHINGTUM!
YEAH? MAYBE THAT'S SO AN' MAYBE IT AIN'T! WE'LL ALL KEEP OUR TRAPS SHUT--BUT WE'LL BE WATCHIN' HIM!
I TOLD FLINT ALL ALONG HE COULDN'T TRUST THAT ROPER!--WAIT TILL HE HEARS THIS!
UGH! STEVE TAKE UM HEAP LONG TIME IN THERE!
HEY, CHIEF!
GOT A MESSAGE FOR YOU! YOUR FRIEND ROPER SAID NOT TO WAIT! HE SAID: "TELL WAHOO I'VE GOT A HEAVY DATE WITH A HUNK OF UNRATIONED SUGAR--AND HER POISONOUS PAPA!" MAYBE YOU UNDERSTAND WHAT HE MEANS?

DONALD DUCK — Youth Will Be Served! — By Walt Disney

WE WANTA GO SWIMMIN'! WILL YOU DRIVE US OUT T' THE LAKE, PLEASE?
MAY WE PLAY ROBINSON CRUSOE
CAST AWAY
ON A DESERT ISLAND?
SURE, SURE, HOP TO IT!
YIPPEE! SPLASH! WOW!
THIS'S WHERE WE GET CAST AWAY!

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

SUSIE, DEAR, I DON'T MEAN TO CRITICIZE, BUT I HATE TO SEE YOU MAKE SUCH HARD WORK OUT OF EVERYTHING.
NOW INSTEAD OF WASHING ONE PLATE AT A TIME JUST GRAB A HANDFUL LIKE THIS AND—
WHERE IS MOTHER

JOE PALOOKA — Don't Forget Private Leemy — By Ham Fisher

BOY, WHAT A BANQUET THAT WAS, AN' BENNY OFFERIN' HIS WHOLE ARMY TO US. PRETTY SWELL I'D SAY!
HE'S A GREAT FRIEND! WELL WE'D BETTER GET SOME SLEEP IF WE'RE LEAVIN' IN THE MORNING.
GEE-THIS IS PARADISE I SURE HATE TGO BACK T'WORK.
I'M ANXIOUS T'GET FIGHTIN' AGAIN.
THEY'LL PROB'LY HAVE US WORKIN' AT STRADIGY FER THE ARMY. KORNEL ZINT--HOIMAN--HIM AN' ME ARE LIKE THAT--- I SURE BEEN SHOWIN' HIM A TIME---
JERRY, WE'RE A COUPLA PRIVATES IN THE U.S. ARMY AN' DON'T FORGET IT---
AN' THE MINUTE WE LEAVE HERE--YOU AIN'T COLONEL LEEMY--- AN' COLONEL ZINT--- WELL I HOPE HE'S GOT A SENSE A HUMOR.

JANE ARDEN — Roeder Squeals — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

ALL RIGHT—I'LL TALK—I'VE NOTHING TO HIDE—I JUST FELT SORRY FOR RATT—
OH, WE KNOW BETTER THAN THAT—RATT STOLE THOSE PLANS AND CAME TO YOU FOR HELP
THAT'S ENOUGH—HE'S NOT TELLING ALL HE KNOWS—TAKE HIM AWAY!
NO, NO, I'M NOT REALLY A SPY—GIVE ME A CHANCE—I'LL TALK—TALKING IS YOUR ONLY CHANCE TO SAVE YOUR NECK, NOW—
WE WILL KNOW IF YOU TELL THE TRUTH—
RATT HAS SOME STOLEN PLANS—I RADIOED A SUBMARINE, THE U78 TO MEET HIM—IT IS HIS ONLY CHANCE TO GET THE PLANS AWAY!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

BUT I DISTINCTLY REMEMBER STEALING THE SECRET MASTER CODE BOOK!! I CAN'T IMAGINE HOW IT COULD POSSIBLY HAVE CHANGED TO A COPY OF HATTIE DALE'S "HOW TO MAKE PEOPLE LIKE YOU"!
ONLY ONE ANSWER—SUPERMAN HAS OUTWITTED ME AGAIN!
I HEAR YOU CALLING!
SUPERMAN!
SO WE MEET FACE TO FACE AT LAST!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

TOO LATE, KING! HANG ON!

DONALD DUCK — Youth Will Be Served! — By Walt Disney

YOUNG MAN, WE'RE THE CULTURE AND COSMOS LITERARY SOCIETY AND WE'VE JUST LEARNED THAT MR. VAN PLAGUE, THE SWEET SHINING SOUL WHO HAS CHEERED AND INSPIRED THOUSANDS WITH HIS BOOKS, IS VISITING IN THIS HOUSE! WE HAVE BROUGHT A WREATH TO PLACE UPON HIS HEAD.
OH, MR. VAN PLAGUE, WE WOULD HAVE KNOWN YOUR CHEERY FACE ANYWHERE! YOU ARE AS MAGNETIC AS WE HAD HOPED! OH, MR. VAN PLAGUE!

FOR A GARDEN OF EDEN IN '43

IT TAKES A

Slack Happy Fam-i-ly . . .

Yes, sir! . . . When it comes to growing its own vegetable plate, the Jones Family knows its onions! . . . From Pop and Mom . . . right down to Little Butch . . . they simply slip into slacks . . . and dig in! . . . Result? . . . Fodder as well as fun! Because . . . the Jones Family chooses its slacks at The Hecht Co. . . . where slacks are built for work . . . slacks in cool, comfortable fabrics . . . slacks cut to allow freedom of the knees when bending down to weed . . . slacks with pockets to hold pruning sheers and seeds . . . slacks that take willingly to the tub after a siege with the good earth. So . . . if you're turning your back-yard into a garden of Eden this Summer . . . join the "land army" . . . choose your slacks at The Hecht Co. . . . and be a completely slack-happy family!
